Milwaukee County Sup. Khalif Rainey called on County Executive Chris Abele to create an office on African American Affairs that will study ways to improve the quality of life for African Americans in Milwaukee County.

Rainey has introduced a resolution calling for the creation of the office, and it has been referred to the Committee on Health and Human Needs, which took up the matter Wednesday afternoon.

"I call upon the county executive to create this office so that we can begin the work of improving the lives of all African Americans in Milwaukee County," Rainey said during a Wednesday morning news conference at the County Courthouse.

He was joined by a number of city and county political leaders, activists, and community groups, which included the Milwaukee Branch of the NAACP, the Black Health Coalition of Wisconsin, and the Milwaukee Chapter of the Nation of Islam.

Milwaukee Ald. Willie Wade and state Rep. Leon Young were among the elected officials in attendance. Both lawmakers plan to seek similar offices at the city and state levels.

"Most indicators irrefutably state that Wisconsin is just about the absolute worst place in America to live if you happen to be African American," said

"For too long we have listened to platitudes about helping African Americans in Milwaukee County..." But the time for mere talk is over. It is no longer enough for our leaders to simply say they are aware of the issues. It is time that we actually begin to aggressively concentrate our efforts to address these issues and actually do something about them."

"Is honoring the athletic heroes of North Division High School's past a worthwhile thing to do? Why or why not?"

JERMAINE OUSLEY (Blue Devil Alum): "Being alumni, kids today need to know what we have done in the past to know what to strive for in the future."

STANLEY W. MCWILLIAMS (North Division Principal): "Yes. It tells us where we have been and where we still have to go, and what we still have to accomplish. The accomplishments of our heroes gives us focus and the courage to succeed in all of our endeavors."

TRESA MALONE (Blue Devil Cheerleader): Yes. Because knowing these were exceptional athletes who also had to excel in academics. It encourages those after us to not only strive to be great athletes, but to also remember that academics is a very important part of the equation which they should also pursue to the highest level."

LINDA MILES CARR-CARLSON (Blue Devil Cheerleader): Yes, it is worthwhile for several reasons. It provides an opportunity to highlight the exceptional talent of past NDHS student athletes. It allows past and present students and the community an opportunity to see past athlete heroes as today's prolific contributors to our society. It serves to inspire our young Blue Devils. At the same time, the whole process of honoring our past athletes makes it possible for us to raise funds to provide scholarships and other financial assistance to students and school programs.

Marquette University recently hosted the sixth annual Project Homeless Connect, a one-day, one-stop annual event where homeless individuals can come to access multiple services and resources they need, all under one roof. The highlight of the event was Kurt, who was once homeless on the streets of Milwaukee. After attending Project Homeless Connect a couple of times he was able to turn his life around and is no longer homeless. ## Rainey calls for Abele to create an Office of African American Affairs

Rainey during the press conference. "With the largest concentration of African Americans in the state--27 percent of Milwaukee County's population is African American--it follows that Milwaukee County is just not a good place for African American to live and work."

According to Rainey, the Office on African American Affairs would include as its objectives: The examination and definition of issues central to the rights and needs of African Americans; recommendations for changes in programs and laws that disproportionately impact African Americans; development and implementation of policies, plans, and programs related to the special needs of African Americans; and promotion of equal opportunities for African Americans.

"For too long we have listened to platitudes about helping African Americans in Milwaukee County," Rainey said. "But the time for mere talk is over. It is no longer enough for our leaders to simply say they are aware of the issues."

"It is time that we actually begin to aggressively concentrate our efforts to address these issues and actually do something about them."

In a press statement responding to Rainey's resolution, Abele said he supports the measure. "I agree with Sup. Rainey that something must be done to address the racial inequalities that exist in Milwaukee County, and while I support and applaud his resolution as a first step in raising awareness, resolutions and press releases won't solve any of these problems -- what we need now is action."

"Earlier this month, a study released by 24/7 Wall Street ranked Milwaukee as the worst city in the United States for African Americans. The metrics examined in the latest study included median household income, educational attainment, homeownership rates, incarceration rates, mortality rates, percent of people with health insurance, and unemployment rates."

study included median household income, educational attainment, homeownership rates, incarceration rates, mortality rates, percent of people with health insurance, and unemployment rates.

The Economic Policy Institute earlier this year released a study that showed the unemployment rate for African Americans in Wisconsin is the highest in the nation at 19.9 percent. That figure is much worse in many Milwaukee neighborhoods, where the unemployment rate for African American men is more than 50 percent.

Wisconsin's last in the nation ranking for the overall well-being of African American children and 2010 United States Census Bureau data showed Wisconsin having the highest African American male incarceration rate in the nation, with over half of African American men in their 30s in Milwaukee county having served prison time. -- Sources used for this story: Milwaukee County Board of Supervisors, office of Sup. ## Why President Obama's defense of Black Lives Matter is so important

President Obama gets it.

At the end of a White House forum about criminal justice, Obama took the time to explain and defend the Black Lives Matter movement.

He's a former professor with a law degree from one of the most distinguished institutions in the world, and that background was on full display as he calmly and firmly defined the movement, noted and anticipated criticism and proceeded to provide the logic behind his opinion:

'Black Lives Matter' is a social media movement that had tried to gel around Ferguson and the Eric Garner case and some other cases that came up.

And very rapidly, it was posited as being in opposition to the police. And sometimes, like any of these loose organizations, some people pop off and say dumb things. And on the other hand, though, it started being lifted up as these folks are opposed to police and they're opposed to cops, and all lives matter.

So the notion was somehow saying black lives matter was reverse racism, or suggesting that other people's lives didn't matter, police officers' lives didn't matter.

Once Black Lives Matter launched and became a dynamic force online and on the streets, with young black people at the helm, detractors immediately cried "reverse racism" and insisted on counter-protesting with signs that read "All Lives Matter."

There is clearly a slip in logic in such an assessment, and Obama made sure to address that in plain language:

I think the reason that the organizers used the phrase 'Black Lives Matter' was not because they said they were suggesting nobody else's lives matter; rather, what they were suggesting was there is a specific problem that is happening in the African American community that's not happening in other communities. And that is a legitimate issue that we've got to address.

The president's comments on Black Lives Matter were not fiery, Black Panther-esque sound bites, but they do show what a different space the president is in right now.

Even this relatively tame, but firm and unequivocal support of a black movement would not have been possible for him to do in his first term or during campaign season.

Obama's critics have accused him numerous times over the years of pandering to black people, and as a black man who resides at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, he has always had to do that political tap dance about issues that all politicians do with more steps and more intricacy.

During this last stretch of his second term, Obama has slowly but surely been hanging up the tap shoes in favor of sitting and holding court.

This is an assured, relaxed Obama who will certainly not do anything to tarnish his own legacy or ruin post-White House opportunities, but he is also now immune to some of the consequences that go along with political speeches and actions.

He is not a 2016 presidential candidate (the constitution prevents that), which means he doesn't have to worry about the opinions of a few billionaires in a super PAC to keep his "war chest" full or about losing votes from whatever region of the country.

In his statements about Black Lives Matter, he made a point to talk about the importance of taking the politics out the discussion:

We as a society, particularly given our history, have to take this seriously. And one of the ways of avoiding the politics of this and losing the moment is everybody just stepping back for a second and understanding that the African American community is not just making this up, and it's not just something being politicized; it's real and there's a history behind it. And we have to take it seriously.

The grievances that the Black Lives Matter movement bring to the forefront should be taken seriously, and it is refreshing to hear the leader of the free world offer his rational, logical support of a movement that is seeking basic human rights such as the right to breathe (even when in police custody).

Once Obama leaves the White House, and hence no longer has the burden/blessing of the presidency, all eyes will be on him to see what he does with this new political freedom.

He's a great orator; it's one of numerous qualities that helped get him elected president twice. How will he use that skill? Will he be a champion of the Black Lives Matter movement?

Only time will tell, and a nation, a world actually, will be watching.

Danile Patrick Moynihan: VISIONARY OR VILLIAN?

"...Black people are asking for unequal treatment. More seriously, it may be that without unequal treatment, there is no way for them to achieve anything like equal status in the long run..."

"Equal opportunity for Black Americans (as promised in the War on Poverty and the Civil Rights Act) 'did not' produce equal results—because African Americans today are a grievously injured people who in fair and equal competition will by and large lose out..."

"The United States is approaching a new crisis in race relations. Black Americans now have expectations that will go beyond civil rights...They will now expect that in the near future equal opportunities for them as a group will produce roughly equal results, as compared with other groups."

But, "this is not going to happen. Nor will it happen for generations to come unless a new and special effort is made."

But that's not going to happen. "First, the racist virus in the American blood stream still affects us. Black Americans will encounter serious personal prejudice for at least another generation."

"Second, three centuries of sometimes unimaginable mistreatment have taken their toll on African Americans. The circumstances of the Black community in recent years have probably been getting worse, not better."

Figured out who uttered those words?

I'll give you a couple of clues: It was not President Barack Obama. And the author was not talking about 'Black people,' per se.' Replace 'Black' and 'African American' with 'Negro.'

And the words were not uttered last week, or last year. It was actually 1965, a half century ago; but it is eerily sounds as if it was uttered yesterday.

And the author was Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a then relatively unknown administrator in President Lyndon B. Johnson's administration. His comments were issued in a couple of memorandums leading to his release of 'The Negro Family: The Case for National Action.' Although only 100 copies of that 72-page internal administration report were issued, the paper ultimately took on a life of its own, initially making its author one of the most controversial people in America.

Many Black leaders called the paper, dubbed the "Moynihan Report," and its author, racist.

The label was undoubtedly unfair. In fact, Moynihan was anything but a bigot. He was a fan of W.E.B. DuBois and E. Franklin Frazier, and had on his bookshelf the

A LETTER TO JAMAHL, JERROD AND JOHN

DEAR JAMAHL, JERROD AND JOHN:

Wow you have grown too quickly. We remember the days you were born...back to back cousins, just days apart. We Tried to guess who would be first. Well Jamahl you were the first to arrive but only by days because, Jerrod was born the next day, and John the following week.

Do you remember the parties we had for your birthdays. We liked cook-outs so along with your friends and neighbors, all of the family came to celebrate with you. Ribs and chicken and potato salad and tomatoes. We had separate cakes so each of you could blow out your own candles.

Your teen years have been testy. Now we understand that adolescence is crazy, your hormones are raging. Your desire to be "cool" and be part of the group, often leads you to think getting crowd approval is more important than doing the right thing. Yes, we were adolescents, once upon a time. We tried a few things, came in too late, even let others influence us, sometimes.

But Jamahl, Jerrod and John, we knew we had to go to school...we knew we had to graduate and we looked forward to having a family....one day! You see growing up is growing UP. Eventually, you have to give up the actions, the stupidity of childhood.

Just as you do not go through life with diapers...or a pacifier in your mouth, you have to begin to look at what men....wise men do.....they work, they raise their families...they create the best opportunities they can for their kids. They grow UP.

No, growing up is NOT DRIVING A STOLEN CAR. No, growing up is NOT CARRYING A GUN. No, growing UP is NOT SKIPPING SCHOOL and getting into trouble. No, growing up is NOT BLAMING SOMEBODY ELSE for YOUR ACTIONS.

You know right from wrong. And you know that doing the wrong thing is going to get you in trouble. Trouble has consequences....and you KNOW that too many of our young men either end up in JAIL, in wheelchairs, or funeral chapels.

works of Kenneth Clark and Gunnar Myrdal.

Moreover, he was an architect of Johnson's War on Poverty, and one of the first advocates for "equal treatment" for African Americans, a policy program that was ultimately called "affirmative action."

That resume was dismissed for two reasons: The Johnson administration abandoned him for political reasons, hiding when the criticism began. And, secondly, the liberal community turned its back on him as the public pendulum swung away from Black empowerment as riots inflamed America.

There was a third reason, one that overshadowed other significant parts of the report:

Moynihan titled one of his chapters a "Tangle of Pathology," a term that served as a lightning rod for opponents of his basic premise.

Moynihan used the term to describe what he viewed as a growing subculture within the Black community that undermined efforts to bring about equality through government-sponsored set-asides.

"The family structure of lower class Negroes is highly unstable, and in many urban centers is approaching complete breakdown...which is a fundamental source (of the) weakness of the Negro community at the present time," he posited.

"Most Negro youth are in danger of being caught up in it (the pathology)," he said. "Many of those who escape do so for one generation only; as things now are, their

We love you JAMAHL, GERROD AND JOHN. WE HAVE HIGH HOPES FOR YOU GUYS. There are no excuses! YOU AND ONLY YOU CAN DETERMINE WHAT YOUR LIFE WILL BE. We are going to give you the best that we have.....food, a place to live, loads of support and encouragement, and expectations to do better than we have done.

Life ain't been a crystal stair for us either. But we live, find our joy and our hope in you and we KNOW YOU MUST DO BETTER.

Look into the mirror.....a handsome, bright, talented young man stands there. He is capable. He is equipped. He is expected to grow up and make contributions to his family, to his neighborhood, to his community.

Yes, we know some things are not fair, sometimes they are not right, and they may be even designed to make it harder. We are working to change these things everyday.

We pledge to be your voice, your buffer, your advocates. We must do it better, too!!

But you have to move on, grow up, push pass the trash, the garbage, and find the window that makes your journey do-able and safe. You have to capture the opportunities before you.....right now! And you have to want success and a different life enough to let go of all of the things that say "you can't" and hold on to everything that says "you can". Yes, YOU CAN.

Jamahl, Jerrod and John, you are me just a few years ago. I could have done drugs and bought cheap guns and had the gang tell me I am the "biggest", the baddest, the coolest". But those friends are gone Jamahl.....long gone Jerrod....and John.

We went to a lot of funerals...we put down a lot of flowers in their memory. And while a few graduated from high school, fewer graduated from college, yet a couple of them are leaders, in Milwaukee, today. Some make it despite! You must be the "despite". We may not change the world, but we can help you change YOUR PATH.

We can never change things for you, your family or the Black community when we lose six out of every ten...Jamahl, Jerrod and John. WE NEED ALL OF YOU.

So we plead with you. You are the change we need. The guns have got to go. WE HAVE TO STOP killing each other. TODAY our children are picking up loaded guns and killing themselves...age two! YES, WE ARE GOING TO WATCH THE POLICE, TOO!

Guns are dropping from table tops and killing children age ten... Drive by's are killing working mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers. Tennis shoes and cell phones and cars that are found immediately because cameras record who you are.....where you are...even the kind of gun being carried.. STOP. THINK, GROW UP! No one

The Feast of All Saints

November 1st is always the Feast of All Saints.

The readings given us are: Rev 7: 2-4, 9-14, 1st John 3: 1-3, and Matthew 5: 1-12a.

We are told that this feast was originally celebrated to honor and remember the many martyrs who died in the first century of Christianity.

The early history remembered the martyrs, but as centuries passed the feast began to include all the named and unnamed followers of Jesus who passed to the other side, to glory.

In Revelation (probably the most misunderstood book of the Bible) John sees the vision of a great multitude of people. They were “sealed” with the seal of our living God. John’s vision continued and he sees “a great multitude, which no one could count, from every nation, race, people, and tongue.”

And who are they? “These are the ones who have survived the time of great distress; they have washed their robes and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb.”

And John, in his letter, can be seen addressing those who have on the white robe and are now

BREAD IN THE WILDERNESS

By Fr. Carl Diederichs,
All Saints Catholic Church

incorporated into Christ.

“See what love the Father has bestowed on us that we may be called the children of God.”

“Beloved, we are God’s children now; what we shall be has not yet been revealed. We do know that when it is revealed we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.”

And Jesus shows himself, as he is in Matthew’s Gospel. And that is where our teaching should come from; The Beatitudes, the “blessings” are ours if we are like him.

We are blessed to be poor in spirit, to mourn, to be meek, to hunger and thirst for justice, to be merciful, to be clean of heart, to be peacemakers, to even be “persecuted” for the sake of righteousness, along with being “insulted.” He himself went through all of these things, for us. It is now our turn.

Today, all of the blessings are relevant, but I would like to hold up “Blessed are they who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they will be satisfied.”

What to make of this? Our current affairs certainly give us a glaring view of the lack of righteousness.

For us, righteousness can be seen in the way we are governed; is it just and fair? for the common good? it can be seen in our own lives by the way we treat our neighbor, by the way we “become prophet, priest and servant leader,” in faithfulness to the anointing we received at our Baptism.

“Blessed are those who are persecuted for the sake of righteousness, for theirs is the Kingdom of heaven.”

I ask blessings on all who are standing up for justice, for the cause of “Black Lives Matter,” for the cause of our environment, for health care for all, for those who challenge the status quo and are willing to become the object of insults and persecution.

“Rejoice and be glad, for your reward will be great in heaven.”

Revival and Feast Day Celebration

St. Martin de Porres Catholic Church, located at 3114 N. 2nd Street, Milwaukee, WI 53212, announces its annual revival and feast day celebration.

The revival theme is “Victorious in Christ: Overcoming violence and Evils of the World.”

A youth gathering will be held on October 31, 2015 at 1:00 p.m. Revival service is at 7:00 pm. The Feast day celebration is November 1, 2015 at 9:00 a.m.

The guest revivalists are twin priests, Father Charles

Smith, SVD and Father Chester Smith, SVD. They are very spirited and talented preachers.

St. Martin de Porres Catholic Church has been a pillar in the neighborhood of North 2nd and West Burleigh Streets for over 100 years.

The church continues to deliver services to a multicultural community and continues to hold true to our faith and morals. A number of ministries exist to serve our community including a Food Pantry supported by Hunger Task Force, St. Vincent DePaul Society, Summer Vacation Bible School, Neighborhood Prayer Services, etc.

This revival provides an opportunity to gather in community prayer and be inspired by two spiritual preachers. All are invited and welcome to attend.

Greater Galilee MBC to celebrate 95 years with Family Day worship celebration Nov. 15

Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church (GGMBC), 2432 North Teutonia Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin will hold their annual Family Day and 95th Anniversary Worship Celebration at 10:30 a.m. on Sunday, November 15. This year’s theme is Envisioning the Future through Our Commitment to Christian Stewardship scripturally based on Jeremiah 29:11 and 1 Corinthians 4:1-2.

The dynamic guest speaker will be Reverend Doctor John Richard Walton, Jr., the senior pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. He is a member of the Milwaukee Christian Center Board of Directors and Executive Board of the Interfaith Conference of Greater Milwaukee. Pastor Walton is a forward-thinking leader in transitional ministry for older, historic and intergenerational churches in this new era. The service will also include a mime presentation by Rhonda Davis.

Rev. John Richard Walton, Jr. of Calvary Baptist

The purpose of Family Day (FD) is to celebrate and invite others into the family of God, as well as to honor GGMBC families. Over the years, it has also become a fellowship and homecoming celebration for former members. The church anniversary, normally celebrated in April, will be combined this year with FD due to needed reconstruction work in the sanctuary. The reconstruction project was recently completed. For 95 years, GGMBC has provided ministries for all ages to win souls for Christ and assist members to live a Christ-centered victorious life. The inner-city church will focus in the future on expanding those ministries and providing more evangelistic and community outreach programs. Pastor Johnny C. White, Jr., D.Min. shared, “Greater Galilee has a rich past as trailblazers and pioneers in Milwaukee”. He added, “Our vision is to display the love and compassion of Christ to those who live in the heart of the city”.

Pastor White and the congregation invite the public to join in this powerful, spiritually-charged open door worship celebration. For more information, please contact the church office at 562-1110.

Y&E YOUTH & EDUCATION

Deontay Farr is a 13 year old boy who lives with Autism. On August 31, he and his mother, Deon Farr, were shopping at the Save-A-Lot store located in the Silver Mill Mall. After checking out and preparing to leave the store they were approached by security.

Deontay was accused of shoplifting. It was very humiliating and after showing the security what was under his shirt was a medical bag and explaining that her son was autistic the security guard showed no remorse and never apologized.

After trying to meet and talk with store owners, Farr was met with opposition.

She left very mad and shared her encounter on a Facebook post. The post sparked outrage in the community and prompted action, led by Community activist Andre' Lee Ellis, who contacted Farr. And together, along with Deontay's father, Mykel Farr, they began to pursue action.

Save-A-Lot owner Dave Hoalth contacted the Farr's and a meeting was held. To make a long story short, what was a disturbing incident was happily resolved last Friday at a news conference at the Save-A-Lot store where the incident took place.

Ellis, Deontay's parents, and Save-A-Lot owner Hoalth announced new policies that will lead to better treatment of cus-children may have to run the gauntlet all over again."

The pathology represented a cultural phenomenon that, he said, was "capable of perpetuating itself without assistance from the white world."

Obviously Moynihan, as a liberal, didn't understand how a single word, even when used in the proper sense, could obscure the message.

Taken at face value, "pathology" can mean a "disease," and if taken out of context, one could infer we, Black folk, suffered from a disease whose symptoms included criminality, promiscuity and illiteracy.

Those social negative indicators were worsened by educational apartheid, poverty and systemic racism. Moynihan surmised those factors were like a cancer plaguing the Black community, exacerbated by a form of PTSD (Post Traumatic Stress Disorder) that had its roots in slavery.

But that part of his report was glossed over or completely ignored by those who charged Moynihan with not only being a racist, but also his report "blamed the victims."

What critics also ignored was that at the time of his report, nearly one-fourth of Black households were headed by a single, uneducated and poor Black woman.

While the White 'illegitimacy' rate (what society in those days called "out-of-wedlock births") was at three percent. The Black rate had risen to 23.6%.

"Incredible mistreatment" over the past three centuries (since 1619 when the first African arrived in America) had resulted in Negro families morphing into a "matriarchal structure."

This new "culture," Moynihan assessed, did not bode well for the future of the Black community, and would retard efforts by African Americans to reach a level of equality in America.

A strongly religious man, Moynihan was a firm believer that the nuclear family was the cornerstone of the American culture, and of the Black community. Most societal problems could be traced to a dysfunctional household.

The new trend toward a Black matriarchal subculture "was out of line with the rest of the American society," and "seriously retards the progress of the group as a whole, and imposes a crushing burden on the Negro male and, in consequence, on a great many Negro women as well."

Moynihan provided a myriad of social negatives that come out of poor, single parent households, including generational poverty, high school drop-outs, Black male involvement in criminal activities and, often, psychological challenges.

In a bold declaration, Moynihan called for a national jobs program, greater access to birth control, and "generous family allowances."

The Negro plight, he said, dictated a U.S. policy "to bring the Negro American to full and equal sharing in the responsibility and rewards of citizenship. To this end, the programs of the federal government bearing on this objective shall be designed to have the effect, directly or indirectly, of enhancing the stability and resources of the Negro American family."

A racist agenda from a bigot? Not hardly.

Moynihan, and President Johnson (at least until Black leaders chastised them both) talked about policies to strengthen Black families, employing Black men and strengthening education.

Some suggest Moynihan's advocacy of Black equality sparked Johnson to make what historians call the most powerful speech of his career (which incidentally Moynihan wrote).

Applauding the efforts of Martin Luther King, Jr. and other civil rights icons, Johnson declared, "Freedom is not enough!

"You do not take a person who, for years, has been hobbled by chains and liberate him, bring him up to the starting line of a race and then say, 'you are free to compete with all the others,' and still justly believe that you have been completely fair," the president said during a speech at Howard University.

"This it is not enough to open the gates of opportunity. All our citizens must have the ability to walk through those gates...we seek not just freedom but opportunity—not just legal equity but human ability...not just equity as a right and a theory, but equality as a fact and as a result."

Powerful words, all the more intriguing since months later, Johnson hid behind the security of the White House walls during the fallout over Moynihan's report that coincided with social unrest and riots around the country.

All Johnson had to fall back on was his relationship with Black leaders to the left (or was it the right) of Black Nationalism, and those whose organizations were funded by his administration.

Not surprisingly, history would show Johnson's "War on Poverty" turned out to be a toothless tiger without the dentures Moynihan proposed, including the tearing down the educational apartheid walls, a national health care program, job training and dignified housing for the poor. Each of those programs was intended, Johnson admitted, to strengthen the Black family, an institution, Moynihan suggested through his extensive research, that was in jeopardy of imploding.

Fifty years later, many, debate Moynihan's conclusions, and the condition of our world had his modest proposals been implemented.

Thus, it's now appropriate on the anniversary of his research to ask if he was a visionary, or a villain? Has the Black condition improved since 1965 or have we regressed? And did Black leaders lead us down the right track, or did they cripple the Freedom Train? I'll give my opinion, next week.

PICK 'N SAVE TO SERVE AS PRESENTING SPONSOR OF 2015-16 MILWAUKEE BUCKS SEASON

Bucks players celebrate the new partnership by making surprise appearances at local Pick 'n Save stores

The Milwaukee Bucks today announced a new partnership with Roundy's Supermarkets, Inc., and Pick 'n Save stores in which the Wisconsin-based grocer will serve as the presenting sponsor of the 2015-16 Bucks season. The partnership is highlighted by new in-arena amenities and in-store promotions that will enhance the fan experience for Bucks supporters throughout southeastern Wisconsin.

"We are excited to partner with one of the NBA's most exciting teams, the Milwaukee Bucks," said Joe Wood, Vice President of Marketing for Roundy's Supermarkets, Inc. "Our customers will be treated to an in-store experience of Bucks merchandising, player appearances and promotions during the 2015-16 NBA season. This partnership joins together two of the most recognizable and established names in the State of Wisconsin, Pick 'n Save and the Milwaukee Bucks, Wisconsin's grocer and Wisconsin's NBA team."

To celebrate today's announcement, Bucks players made surprise appearances at three area Pick 'n Save stores: two in Oak Creek (8770 S. Howell Ave. and 6462 S. 27th St.) and one in Wauwatosa (6950 W. State St.). The players were on hand from 3-5 pm assisting shoppers throughout the store, and had a limited number of pairs of tickets to Wednesday night's Home Opener to hand out to fans who spent $50 using their Roundy's Fresh Perks card.

As part of Pick 'n Save's new relationship with the Bucks, the grocer will feature two new concessions options at the BMO Harris Bradley Center this season – the Pick 'n Save Kids Cart and Grab 'n Go Station. The Kids Cart will feature a variety of items for kids provided by Pick 'n Save vendors and priced at just $1 per item, while the Grab 'n Go Station will be an open-air cooler featuring quick and easy meals, snacks and beverages for fans wanting to grab a quick bite during games.

Additionally, Pick 'n Save will engage fans with three separate in-store sweepstakes during the season featuring ticket giveaways and the chance to win one-of-a-kind Bucks prizes. The partnership also includes in-arena signage, digital branding on www.bucks.com, player appearances at local stores and much more.

UW study: Concussion rates way down after new rule in high-school football practice

MADISON – New research shows that limiting the amount of full-contact tackling during high school football practices can have a big impact on reducing the number of concussions among players.

A University of Wisconsin–Madison study examined sports-related concussion rates among Wisconsin high school football players after the state's interscholastic athletic association limited the amount and duration of full-contact activities during team practices.

The rule, which first went into effect for the 2014 season, prohibits full contact during the first week of practice, limits full contact to 75 minutes per week during week 2, and caps it at 60 minutes thereafter.

Full contact is defined as drills or game situations when full tackles are made at a competitive pace and players are taken to the ground.

Findings show that the rate of sports-related concussions sustained during high school football practice was more than twice as high in the two seasons before the rule change as compared to the 2014 season, said Tim McGuine, senior scientist in the department of orthopedics and rehabilitation at the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health.

The study was presented Oct. 24 at the American Academy of Pediatrics national conference in Washington, DC. "This study confirms what athletic trainers in high-school football have long believed about the association of full-contact drills or practices and the likelihood of concussion," said McGuine. "This is probably also true for other football injuries such as sprains, fractures and dislocations."

The study used data from the Wisconsin Interscholastic Sports Injury Research Network, which has recruited and enrolled more than 16,000 adolescent athletes from 103 high schools and sport venues across Wisconsin. They serve as subjects for cross-sectional, cohort and randomized control trials.

Only five states require high school students to take a class about money

Article courtesy of MarketWatch via "The Rundown"

Most American teens are not learning in high school about the basics of paying bills, building good credit and avoiding debt, even as they're increasingly relying on student loans to finance their higher education, according to a new financial literacy study.

Just five states in the country scored an A on the 2015 National Report Card on State Efforts to Improve Financial Literacy in High Schools, a report produced by the Center for Financial Literacy, at Champlain College in Burlington, Vt.

The report measures financial education efforts across the U.S.

The five states that got an A are the only ones in the country that require students take a dedicated semester of personal finance courses. Nearly a quarter of the states received a failing grade. Those states have, according to the report, virtually no requirements for teaching financial literacy at the high school level.

In lieu of high school classes, teens have to rely on their parents or simply their own research and experience to pick up these lessons - or never get them at all. That lack of sound financial advice is particularly problematic when so many students take on loans to attend college.

John Pelletier, director of the Center for Financial Literacy and the author of the report, said he's walked into high school classrooms where the bulk of students believe their chosen career will make them at least $100,000 a year.

"You can see how people, based on that flawed analysis, think that they can afford $70,000, $80,000 or $90,000 in debt," he said. "What needs to be taught is more career exploration, more understanding about income."

HOLIDAY PARADE

- Local TV and Radio Personalities, Dignitaries

- Costumed Characters including Ronald McDonald and Racing Sausages

- Specialty Vehicles, including the Oscar Mayer Wienermobile

- And, of course, Santa Claus!

The parade begins at 9:30 a.m. and will continue until approximately 11:00 a.m. Attendance for the parade is free and all are welcome.

From its start in 1927, the Milwaukee Holiday Parade remains a cherished Wisconsin holiday tradition. As in previous years, approximately 500 Johnson Controls volunteers will be collecting non-perishable food donations along the parade route to benefit Hunger Task Force's Food for Families. Over the past several years, volunteers have collected tens of thousands of pounds of food in addition to cash donations. "This is the tenth year in a row that Johnson Controls is collecting food and cash donations during the parade to benefit Food for Families," says Associate Producer, Kathy Neuberger. "Thanksgiving is the week following the parade, and the food collection is the perfect way to get everyone in the spirit of the season. It really feels like the holidays are here when you see a community coming together to help one another."

Parade spectators are encouraged to donate generously, and items most needed include evaporated milk, peanut butter, and canned fruits and juices.

Attendance in previous years has been estimated as high as 100,000, and the parade continues to grow in support and participation. For more information or a detailed parade route map, visit www.milwaukeekeeparade.com.

"PayQuick with eWIC"

A Convenient, Speedy Way for Families to Purchase WIC-Approved Foods

New "eWIC" card allows families to "Just Swipe It" for a safe simple and convenient way to shop for WIC-approved foods.

The Wisconsin Women, Infants & Children (WIC) program recently announced they will distribute monthly benefits to their clients through an "eWIC" (or electronic WIC) benefit system in Wisconsin. The official rollout of eWIC in SE WI began during the week of September 21, 2015.

WIC food packages provide supplemental foods designed to meet the special nutritional needs of low-income pregnant, breastfeeding, non-breastfeeding postpartum women, infants and children up to five years of age who are at nutritional risk.

Previously, benefits were distributed via monthly checks, and over time, proved to be challenging for families. Shopping could be difficult and if checks were lost, reissuing them was not guaranteed and time consuming, creating hurdles for families to get the help they needed.

"Over the past few years, WIC has seen a decrease in the number of eligible families using our services, which may be due to the inconvenience of paper checks," says Angie Wilks-Tate, WIC Project Director at MLK Heritage Health Center. We hope that the convenience of the new eWIC card will encourage families to return to WIC."

WIC's new "PayQuick with eWIC" initiative gives families a convenient and speedy way to shop for WIC-approved foods using an eWIC electronic benefit card. Specific benefits of the eWIC card include:

- Safe. No more paper checks

- Simple. Hassle-free checkout.
- Convenient. Only buy the food needed each time.
- "We are very excited about our new eWIC system," says Wilks-Tate.

"Now, mothers can

"Just Swipe it" (eWIC card) when they go to the store, giving them a convenient way to shop for WIC approved foods. eWIC ensures families continue to receive foods which are healthy and support them and their children's growth."

- More -

WIC food packages provide moms with choice and variety. Foods, such as: milk, eggs, iron-fortified cereals, whole grain bread, tortillas, brown rice, and fruits and vegetables, provide WIC nutritionists flexibility in prescribing culturally appropriate food packages to mothers and their children.

"At WIC, we are Here for You (clients)," says Wilks-Tate. "We continue to strive daily to make sure that the families we serve have the best, most convenient access to healthy and nutritious foods."

Since the rollout, WIC has experienced great amounts of positive feedback from their clients. They anticipate the number of participants in the program to rise substantially. Interested mothers can contact 1-800-722-2295.

About WIC

The Wisconsin WIC Program (Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children) is administered at the Federal level by the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The WIC program was established in 1974 to provide Federal grants to States for nutrition education, supplemental foods, and health care referrals for low and moderate-income pregnant, breastfeeding, and non-breastfeeding postpartum women, as well as infants and children who have a health or nutrition need.

To assess eligibility or to find out more about WIC services, visit: <http://www.dhs.wisconsin.gov/wic/> or call the hotline at 1-800-722-2295.

Ribbon "Untying" Celebration Officially opens new St. Ann Center's Bucyrus Campus

A physically disabled young lady leads with the ceremonial "untying" of a festive cloth by Mayor Tom Barrett, Ald. Russell Stamper, II, St. Ann Center's Bucyrus Campus, located at 2450 W. North Ave.

African drums accompanied the unique ceremony that included, a blessing and African libation ceremony, music by the Amazing Grace Chorus, made up of people with early onset Alzheimer's Disease and other forms of dementia, as well as their caregivers, and food vendors from the community that included Running Rabbit, Coffee Makers & More, The Big Easy MKL and many African dishes.

Jammin' 98.3 radio was also on hand to introduce the Bucyrus Campus staff and talk about its services to the community.

Remarks were made by Mayor Barrett, Tim Sullivan, former CEO of Bucyrus International Inc. and St. Ann Center capital campaign chairman and board member, Diane Beckley, CEO of the Bucyrus Campus, and St. Ann Center.

The Bucyrus Campus is a replication of St. Ann Center's Stein Campus, located on Milwaukee's south side for over 30 years. Featuring a unique intergenerational model, the Center provides community-based health and educational day services to children, the frail elderly and adults with cognitive and physical disabilities, while providing resources and support to their caregivers.

The Bucyrus Campus has already created over 50 local jobs and is expected to bring over 100 more as it continues to add services. Currently, the facility offers day care for infants and toddlers and a Head Start program in collaboration with Next Door. In October, adult day care units will open. A dental clinic serving clients with severe disabilities is scheduled to open early next year.

Future plans include an overnight respite unit, an indoor intergenerational playground and lap pool and a community health clinic. Plans for the 7.5-acre grounds include a 500-seat baseball, playgrounds and community gardens.

A $5 million capital campaign continues to raise funds to complete the facility. St. Ann Center spent five years assessing the needs of the near north side. —Compiled by MCJ Staff

The stadium is located southwest of MPS' Barack Obama School of Career and Technical Education (formerly Center High School), 5075 N. Sherman Blvd.

Custer Stadium is one of two new football and soccer fields to be built by MPS. The other is the rebuilt South Stadium. Both facilities are a component of district-wide efforts to expand athletic programs, tied to MPS' eight Strategic Objectives or "Big Ideas" to improve student success.

"We want to redefine the MPS experience for our student and staff members that we students have access to stronger extracurricular and athletic opportunities is a critical part of a well-rounded education," said Driver in a press statement.

Custer Stadium is home for the football programs of King, North, James Madison Academic Campus, Morse/Marshall School for the Gifted and Talented, the Obama School of Career and Technical Education, and Washington High School of Information Technology. The stadium projects were funded through Qualified School Construction Bonds issued by MPS through the city of Milwaukee. Photos by Yvonne Kemp.

My Brother's Keeper summit brings resources and services to northside

All boys and men of color responded enthusiastically to an invitation to the My Brother's Keeper Neighborhood summit Saturday to learn about services and resources meant to help improve health and wealth. The event was held at North Division High School, 1011 W. Center St. The summit was free and open to the public. The summit was hosted by Ald. Russell Stamper, II and Mayor Tom Barrett.

Residents in many areas of Milwaukee are underserved when it comes to counseling, job opportunities, and health and wellness information that can be beneficial and life-changing, said Stamper. The summit was sponsored by the City of Milwaukee, My Brother's Keeper, the Milwaukee Fatherhood Initiative, and the Black Male Achievement Advisory Council. According to the 2010 Census, only 44.7 percent of the Milwaukee metro area's working-age Black males between the ages of 16-64 were employed in 2010, and many reside in the four "Promise Zones," areas of the community that have been targeted with community and economic development strategies. UNA VAN DUVAL: "Stop using Wisconsin money to run far from president. He should withdraw from the race, or use his own money."

RITA LEE: "Scott Walker should stop running for president and return to Wisconsin and start working to employ our low-income people, work on education and get the necessary work done."

SESSIE AGBLEY: "I believe that there are a lot of issues that need to be tackled in Wisconsin. Therefore, if his presidential campaign isn't going well, then it's fitting that he should pull out and run his state."

DR. DIMITRI MILLS: "Gov. Walker should continue to be governor (in order to) correct his mistakes, and concentrate on developing the education and financial growth of the state of Wisconsin."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:
"Since our Governor and Presidential Candidate Scott Walker has lost his early momentum and front runner status due to the emergence of Billionaire and Presidential Candidate Donald Trump, should he withdraw from the race and focus on running Wisconsin?"
