HONORING THE SIGNIFYER!

Black journalism organization and community shows its love and appreciation for Community Journal Associate Publisher and Columnist
MIKEL HOLT

Family, friends, community activists, print, radio and television media representatives and personalities, political figures and everyday people recently packed the great room of the Wisconsin Black Historical Society and Museum to honor and celebrate Milwaukee Community Journal Associate Publisher and SIGNIFYIN' Columnist Mikel Holt. Many who spoke, such as Dr. Howard Fuller, former Alderman Mike McGee, Jr., MCJ Editor Thomas Mitchell, Jr., Mayor Tom Barrett and WTMJ Radio's Charlie Sykes, and others shared stories and thanked Holt for his continued service to the community "shaking the tree," and reporting on issues of impact to the city's Black community, especially education and Parental School Choice. Holt said he's now focusing on educating readers and the community about their history and the need to know that history and the history makers in order to foster change in the community for the better. Holt was presented with a portrait of himself by painter and photographer Richard Allen, and a hand-carved African walking stick, both presented by the Wisconsin Black Media Association (WBMA), which sponsored the event.--Compiled by MCJ Staff

Creativity, connections help UWM student start her own business

ADVERTORIAL

Cordella Jones doesn't hang out with bankers and angel investors in her everyday life. Nor is she ready for a guest appearance on "Shark Tank."

But she got support in starting her own business through one of several programs at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (UWM) designed to encourage students and alumni to turn their ideas into businesses.

Jones won a year's worth of coaching from placing in the Student Startup Challenge, a competition based not on a business plan, but on the strength of a promising idea.

It's one component of UWM's startup culture, which offers support, events and services to get students and alumni thinking like leaders and planning like business owners.

Jones' proposal to develop a mobile friendly, web-based information bank to help families and teachers match students to programs to improve educational outcomes earned her a top 10 finish in the 2014 UWM Student Startup Challenge. Her proposed program identifies resources for kids in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Now in her 30s, Jones enrolled in the university's Lubar School of Business in 2013 after taking almost two decades away from college. She works at BMO Harris Bank, and plans to use her UWM degree to advance both her banking career and her business.

She wanted to do more than just improve her business skills, however. She wanted to use her creative side.

"To know me personally is to know I'm always thinking of a business idea. My dad was a small businessman and I grew up with that background. When I saw the Student Startup Challenge on campus, I thought: 'This is perfect. I can actually see if I have good ideas or if I'm just coming up with stuff.'"

Her idea, ASAPk!ds, grew directly out of her own experiences as a young black woman who was a first-generation college student.

"I feel like the reason my first time around at the university wasn't as successful was that, at that time, I don't think I was really prepared... I struggled academically and financially.

"I didn't have that family network to help me prepare for college. So when I got older, I started to realize that if you don't have a family that works for the school administration or if you aren't referred to local programs, your family kind of struggles to get you connected and financially supported."

ASAPk!ds is a web-based application she's developed to help parents and teachers find resources that are available in the community to help them improve children's learning and lives.

While there are many enrichment programs available, most of them are not one-size-fits-all programs. Other students, especially those who are potential first generation college students may have different challenges or different interests. In addition, she said, most households and classrooms are too busy to keep up with the full range of educational resources available and fit them to the needs of individual children.

"If you have one child interested in athletics and another interested in math and science and then another one who has some type of disability, you're all over the place trying to find information. I think there is a feeling of guilt in the community that many parents and teachers have for not having enough time in a day to gather the information to help their students. Control I think is what people need, some way to take action now and not later."

Jones also felt that having one comprehensive, organized site where parents and teachers can find diverse academic enrichment and support resources could be useful.

"It just made me think. 'Why doesn't this information exist in one location? Why should you have to go all over the place?'"

After she came up with the name, ASAPk!ds, she got so excited about it that she actually bought the domain name. A year later, she decided to enter the grant competition. "I pitched it and they liked it."

With the help of the seed money and support from the Startup Challenge and other entrepreneurial programs, she has developed a prototype with the UWM App Brewery, established her own limited liability corporation, started testing the ASAPk!ds app and is interested in making partnerships in the business community with more student program providers to pilot this spring.

"With Wisconsin ranking 50th in entrepreneurship among the states and the challenges that women-led technology startups face in terms of raising funds, the chances of ASAPk!ds going to market may have never happened without the early support and seed funding from the UWM community," Jones said.

2016 Milwaukee Film Festival Call for Entries Now Open

Festival Offers to Pay for All Work Screened; Free Entry for All Films; $27,000 in Cash Prizes Promised

Tuesday, February 23, 2016 – Milwaukee Film is now accepting entries for the 8th annual Milwaukee Film Festival, Sept. 22 Oct. 6. Works of all genres, forms, and lengths will be considered.

The deadline for all entries is Wednesday, June 8. The festival is in its fifth year of offering free submission for all films and, for the second consecutive year, Milwaukee Film will offer to pay for all work that is screened in the festival.

Milwaukee Film's Artistic and Executive Director Jonathan Jackson said, "In the film festival world, it's surprisingly rare to pay the filmmakers whose work you screen. We're excited to take a stand for filmmakers.

Could you imagine major theater, ballet, or orchestra companies not paying the artists who perform in their shows?"

"The Milwaukee Film Festival dedicates tremendous resources to artist sustainability. They have no submission fee, they pay for the content, and they travel and house the artists. They even provide a place they can have meals together each day. It's one of the most supportive festivals in the country!" said Emily Best, founder and CEO of Seed&Spark (seedandspark.com), a nationally recognized platform for filmmakers to grow their audiences at every stage.

The Milwaukee Film Festival offers additional support to filmmakers in the form of cash awards. New in 2016, a $5,000 cash award will be given to the best music video in The Milwaukee Music Video Show. Half of this award will be given to the video's director while the other half will be given to the featured musical act.

The following juried cash awards will also be presented, with additional possible awards to be announced prior to the festival:

- Herzfeld Competition Award ($10,000)
- Cream City Cinema Jury Award ($5,000)
- Documentary Jury Award ($5,000)
- Shorter is Better Award ($1,000)
- Kids Choice Short Film Award ($1,000)

In addition, there will be two nonjuried audience awards, presented by Allan H. (Bud) and Suzanne L. Selig.

The entry form and complete information regarding eligibility for the 2016 Milwaukee Film Festival Call for Entries is available at <http://mkefilm.org/callforentries>. Questions about submissions may be directed to entry@mkefilm.org.

PERSPECTIVES

Madison police estimate that up to 20,000 protesters marched to the Wisconsin State Capitol Thursday, 1,500 of whom made it inside, including workers and students staging a walkout for a rally called "A Day Without Latinos" against two immigration bills.--Rt.com/USA

Latinos display what Black people won't...UNITY!

I couldn't help but be overwhelmed by jealousy as I watched 20,000 Hispanics rallying outside the capitol in Madison last week.

The massive show of political strength was orchestrated to illustrate Latino opposition to a couple of Republican bills aimed at disparaging that minority group. The Hispanic protest also sent a message to both major political parties that they are a force to be reckoned with.

Twenty thousand Hispanics! Ten times 2,000 coming together in a show of force; traveling from all parts of the state with a single agenda.

Twenty thousand mooning the Republican Party on short notice.

And no, that wasn't salsa running down the street gutters surrounding the capitol building.

Jealous? That is putting it mildly. Or, maybe the wrong emotion.

Anger, frustration and mystification were equally appropriate reactions. In fact, stupefied and confused came to mind when I had to sadly acknowledge that not once during my 40 years of writing this column has there been a clarion call that resulted in as many Black folks converging on the state capitol.

And Lord knows we've had reason to express our frustration; to decry racist legislation. Or to pee on the car door of some racist politician who still thinks we're counted as 3/5 of a human being, or that Wisconsin is a suburb of the old Apartheid version of South Africa.

But nooooooooo.

Despite the fact that we're the largest ethnic group in the state, we have far more reason to undertake a massive protest than any ethnic group in the state, the only time I can remember bus loads of Black folks going to Madison was when they had a fried chicken sale on one side of town and a weave sale on the other.

All joking aside. We did make an impression when the assembly was set to vote on the school choice legislation back in 1989. But even then, it was probably closer to 2,000 than 20,000. Why, you might ask, is that sad reality, a reality?

I hate to be the bearer of bad tidings, or in this case, put our dirty underwear out in public...AGAIN!

But there's a direct link between our political immaturity, refusal to incorporate a Nationalistic philosophy, and general acceptance of disunity, and our sociopolitical and economic status.

We're poor, under- and mis-educated, disenfranchised and at each others' throats for the same reasons we can't even get 2,001 Black people to Madison to protest any number of assaults against us.

Several weeks ago Rev. Greg Lewis, president of Pastors' United summarized this political phenomenon when he posed the question: "Who can explain why--with our numbers, resources and political representation--is Milwaukee the worst place in the United States for Black people?"

"We have the highest Black male unemployment rate, the highest poverty rate, the widest gap between Black and white academic achievement, etc., etc., etc."

"It's like we're playing volleyball and every time they lob the ball to us, we either stand there and let it hit us in the head, or we turn away, leave the court and take a cigarette break. Makes no sense."

As my thoughts moved from the television screen--where 20,000 Hispanics were rallying in Madison--to my laptop, Rev. Lewis' questions came to mind. As one of several Griots who plays a journalist on television, I can come up with several explanations for the reverend's question. I could put blame on the Black politicians who put their parties before the people, Black people, including "leaders" who believed white ice gets colder; and a propaganda and mis-education campaign that was so successful, we willingly created a back door to the plantation mansion.

Tyrone Dumas, one of the community's self-employed referees, reminded me yesterday that 30 years ago, following the national Black Leadership Summit--which we both attended-- local activists coordinated a week-long conference to iron out a Black agenda. Among our priorities was the creation of a political caucus that would advance our agenda at every level of government from a united front.

That was about the same time a hearing was held before a Common Council committee to discuss a planning grant for an African American cultural center.

I will never forget the testimony of one white alderman--an Italian who represented the "liberal" east-side. He asked his colleagues to vote down the grant because, he said without regard to the Black people in the room: "If they build a cultural center, they will stop holding dinners at the Italian Community Center."

The council ultimately voted the measure down.

Next week, I'll conclude this column with an assessment of our reaction to two local political races, which will greatly impact our quality of life over the next decade, and raises this question: Are we ready to assume control of our Freedom Train?

Hotep.

P.S.: I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the Wisconsin Black Media Association for the beautiful program they put together in my honor at the Wisconsin Black Historical Society/Museum on Sunday. To see the packed house of family, friends, co-workers (past and present), media peers and community persons was humbling and moving! I, my wife Warwees, and family thank you!

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

Afraid of Beyoncé? When did America's police become so soft?

Opinion by David A. Lov, courtesy of theGrio.com, posted February 23, 2016

When did America's police become so soft? This isn't to say that all police officers are cowardly; a good majority are hard-working individuals who care about and place their lives on the line for the communities they serve.

However, there's no shortage of stories these days of police operating violently out of fear and often with deadly and unjustified consequences.

The latest boogie man for the men in blue is not some black teen in a hoodie; it's Beyoncé. Yes, the Bootylicious pop star apparently still has police shoo. They are still butt-hurt over her Super Bowl halftime performance and her Formation video, which they apparently perceive as a Black Panther protest and #BlackLivesMatter demonstration rolled into one. In reality, it was an entertaining, culturally relevant and strong political statement.

Yet many cops seem to believe that Bey was calling on her infamous "Bey Hive" to take up arms against police. One Tennessee sheriff even blamed Beyoncé for a shooting outside his home and the deaths of seven law enforcers.

The Miami Fraternal Order of Police is calling for a police boycott of her Formation tour, because apparently the police can decide what is an acceptable exercise of free speech.

And the NYPD wants her to apologize and to publicly say that she did not advocate violence against police before they will protect her. Minister Luis Farrakhan has vowed to protect Beyoncé with the Fruit of Islam if the police refuse to do it.

Yet it's the police who maintain a racist and bullying culture. With a rate of domestic abuse that is two to four times higher than the general population, police should be the last ones to lecture black celebrities and activists about violence.

How many times in the last year alone have we seen the men in blue operate violently out of fear? They have a strong tendency to shoot first and ask questions later. That is what happened with 12-year old Tamir Rice in Cleveland and Akai Gurley in New York. And when it happens, they never seem to fail to blame the the victims, who are no longer alive to defend themselves.

If they want to appear tough, why don't they ever seem

"And the NYPD wants her to apologize and to publicly say that she did not advocate violence against police before they will protect her. Yet it's the police who maintain a racist and bullying culture. to fight against the corruption and brutality in their ranks? If they are so bad, why don't they go after the thugs in their department who beat and kill black children in cold blood in the streets and give law enforcement a bad name? And why are they silent when their fellow black police officers are racially profiled and harassed by white officers? The cold reality is that many of these officers are paranoid little boys hiding who use their shield as badges of manhood.

And now, the sight of dancers in Black Panther-inspired leotards on the football field ruined their precious halftime party.

However, no one outside of the Fox News bubble seems to be taking their gripe seriously. Remember that staged anti-Beyoncé protest that no one bothered to show up to?

But Beyoncé is far from being the only public figure who has been the focus of their ire. Police feelings were hurt when New York Mayor Bill de Blasio expressed his support for Black Lives Matter, and -- breaking it down as only the father of a black son can do -- said he instructs his son on how to conduct himself when in the presence of the police. T he NYPD had a tantrum, with officers booing at the mayor and turning their backs on him in open defiance and their union chief declaring it was a "wartime police department" and insisting de Blasio had blood on his hands.

And now the cops are afraid of Beyoncé, another example of a term I'm going to call "blue fragility." If it's Beyoncé versus the police, I'll vote for Beyoncé each and every time. Because sisters are strong, and many of America's police have apparently gone soft.

Find Another Way

Every January we find that people are inundated with ideas on how to improve. How to improve their weight, break old and unproductive habits or begin new, more positive ones.

Yet by February, many people have given up on their desire to be a "new person" in the "new year". Frustrations, failures and the perception that change is simply too difficult can cause people to sacrifice the blessings that come with a renewed effort to do more and improve.

The enemy specializes in making people feel insignificant, unworthy and overwhelmed and failing to achieve goals can be very discouraging yet it is incumbent upon believers in Christ to recognize the power that God provides.

Failure, even related failure simply provides the ammunition needed to go back and work through another strategy to get the job done.

Very few inventors created what they I visioned the first time. Many of them created prototype after prototype in an effort to create that one perfected product that would change their lives and many times the lives of others. The Wright brothers crashed their flying machines innumerable times.

They were laughed at, scorned and ridiculed publicly. Word spread every time they failed and pictures of their crashes were aired throughout the nation which was quite a feat in a pre-Facebook world. Gratefully, the Wright brothers did not allow discouragement to keep them from creating what was the foundational framework for our modern aircrafts.

Despite the failures, they simply found another way until they were successful. Likewise, you must find the boldness, courage and faith to find another way. When one method fails, seek God in prayer and ask Him for direction and provision and brace yourself.

God opening doors doesn't always look the way one thinks it should. Many times, your plan will end up on the cutting room floor as God, the master editor, allows His divine plan to take shape.

Giving up isn't an option. People need you to succeed so that they are empowered with the knowledge that they too can make it. Our history books are full of examples of people who proved that with the power of God and the determination to do more, success was possible even if they had to find another way.

We are eternal, indebted to our foreparents who refused to sit back and accept the conditions that society saddled them with - no matter what was thrown at them, they found another way!

Today you may be facing a myriad of issues but no matter what, do not give up - find another way. Marriage in trouble?

Find another way to make it better! Can't find a job, find another way to market yourself or pick up a new skill so that you are more marketable.

Are your children failing in school, find another way to aid them in learning. No doubt you will have to put effort into the goal but you can do it. Even if you have to find another way!

The NFL, Packed with Christian Players, Falls Short in Welcoming Faith

Days before the Super Bowl, a new Faith Equality Index score of the National Football League--24 out of 100--reveals the league has work to do in welcoming, embracing, and celebrating Faith Driven Consumers

RALEIGH, NC/Christian News Service -- Faith Driven Consumer™ (FDC)-representing 41 million Americans who spend $2 trillion annually, has earned wide recognition for its groundbreaking FaithEqualityIndex.com (FEI), which scores more than 400 major brands for compatibility with the FDC community. Yesterday, the group released its first annual ranking of Super Bowl advertisers, which also includes a specific score for the National Football League.

"The National Football League is significantly comprised of Christian players, coaches, and executives, and as such, many in our community assume the organization is welcoming of Faith Driven Consumers. But its score of 24 out of 100 says otherwise.

As with most brands, this may not be intentional, rather it stems from a lack of awareness and understanding of this color in the diversity rainbow," said Chris Stone, Certified Brand Strategist and founder of Faith Driven Consumer.

BRYAN ANDREW WILSON SAYS TOP 30 HIT "OVERFLOW" IS A PERSONAL PRAYER

Bryan Andrew Wilson

Spiritual Soul Singer Bryan Andrew Wilson leaps on to Billboard Magazine's Gospel Airplay chart at #27 this week with his rousing new worship song "Overflow" (Bryan's Songs/MRI-Sony RED). The Champaign, IL-based singer says the song is his personal prayer.

"I wrote it as a song expressing my desire of needing God," Wilson says. "I know I'm not the only one who needs Him. It simply asks God to overflow in my life: financially, spiritually and physically."

The uplifting track features dynamic backing vocals by Roderick Giles & Grace and is featured on a digital single bundle that includes the regular track, an instrumental and a performance track. It closes with a bluesy, unplugged live rendition of the 1963 Ben E. King classic "Stand By Me" that was recorded live on WEFT 90.1 FM in Champaign, IL. The set also boasts a colorful, five-page digital booklet that includes "Overflow" lyrics, session credits and photos. Now on sale.

BLACK HISTORY PART TWO

"Until the lion writes his own story, the tale of the hunt will always glorify the hunter." --African proverb

"I Fear I May Have Integrated My People Into a Burning House"

Singer, actor and activist Harry Belafonte reveals surprising admission by the "Drum Major for Peace"

Midway through the Civil Rights movement, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. realized that the struggle for integration would ultimately become a struggle for economic rights.

I remember the last time we were together, at my home, shortly before he was murdered. He seemed quite agitated and preoccupied, and I asked him what the problem was. "I've come upon something that disturbs me deeply," he said.

"We have fought hard and long for integration, as I believe we should have, and I know that we will win. But I've come to believe we're integrating into a burning house."

That statement took me aback. It was the last thing I would have expected to hear, considering the nature of our struggle, and I asked him what he meant.

"I'm afraid that America may be losing what moral vision she may have had," he answered. "And I'm afraid that even as we integrate, we are walking into a place that does not understand that this nation needs to be deeply concerned with the plight of the poor and disenfranchised."

"Until we commit ourselves to ensuring that the underclass is given justice and opportunity, we will continue to perpetuate the anger and violence that tears at the soul of this nation."

I would like to see black America honestly examine where we are at this point in history. We must stop relying on Democrats or Republicans or institutions that oppress us, and take responsibility for ourselves. Whenever we've stepped out to assume responsibility for our future, we've succeeded in our mission. White America didn't give us the gains we've made.

Through various movements we went out and fought for our liberation and made ourselves a better people, and the world a better place. I am far from disillusioned.

Deep in my soul, I know there are more Rosa Parks, more Dr. Kings, and more Ella Bakers ready to emerge. Perhaps we are the firefighters who can save the burning house. Martin would have embraced such a thought.

MKE Fellows Launches Milwaukee Professional Development Initiative

The MKE Fellows is an initiative sponsored by the Fellowship Open, ALIVE, Inc., and the Greater Milwaukee Committee to attract exceptional talent to Milwaukee. It started four years ago as part of a pilot project with Morehouse College.

Founded by Skip Poliner and spearheaded by Attorney John W. Daniels, Jr., Charles Harvey and Cory Nettles, the initiative has raised more than $1 million to support the academic efforts of these students.

It has now grown into a model unparalleled in its focus on changing the career opportunities for African-American males.

The MKE Fellows identifies students from Wisconsin, provides support for their scholarship and professional development, and places them in internships. The program recently expanded from its 20 internships in 2015 to more than 40 in 2016.

The flagship companies involved include Robert W. Baird & Co., Aurora Health Care, Boys and Girls Clubs of Greater Milwaukee, the Greater Milwaukee Committee, the Greater Milwaukee Foundation, Harley-Davidson, Johnson Controls, Inc., Marquette University Law School, the Milwaukee Bucks, the Milwaukee Brewers, and Quarles & Brady LLP.

In addition to the corporate internships, a group of local professionals from various organizations have agreed to serve as mentors for these students.

MKE Fellows are also required to attend a series of professional development workshops designed to help

The Nobel prize winning scientist Albert Einstein teaching a physics class at Lincoln university (HCBU in Pennsylvania) in 1946. No history book ever mentioned that about him.

His anti-racism views and work are often totally ignored by historians. He knew more than just physics and relativity.

He was a Jew who fled Nazi Germany, who couldn't get a job anywhere near his field because he was Jewish, but people are shocked he was against racism.

Of course he was, he lived being a victim of it.

The Nobel prize winning scientist Albert Einstein said: "The separation of the races is not a disease of colored people. It is a disease of White people. I do not intend to be quiet about it."

As Quiet As It's Kept...

Hannibal Barca (247 BC - 183 BC) was an African Carthaginian military commander, generally considered one of the greatest military commanders in history. Also credited for having major victories against the Roman Empire with his mighty warriors that marched into battle on the backs of great elephants! He was later defeated by the Roman Empire and returned to Carthage, North Africa where he was elected to the "Office of Suffete" which was the Highest Appointed Official in Carthage at that time. SIDE NOTE: Contrary to the incorrect depictions passed down through history, Hannibal was NOT a White man. He was in fact a Black man of North Africa and the coins bearing his likeness in the attached article clearly tell the real truth of who he was. --Courtesy of www.blackhistoryheroes.com.

MCW Posts Results of Research Study Involving Transfusions in Trauma Patients, Civilian trauma study supports use of battlefield blood transfusion protocol

PROPPR

Pragmatic, Randomized Optimal Platelet and Plasma Ratios

The Medical College of Wisconsin Department of Surgery, Division of Trauma and Critical Care took part in a national, multi-center study to compare how severely injured patients are given blood transfusions necessary to save their lives. The study took place at Froedtert & the Medical College from January to December 2013. It was designed to compare the effectiveness of different blood product ratios (Platelets, Plasma, and Red Blood Cells).

Locally, 42 patients were enrolled in the study (which enrolled a total of 680 patients.) The results were published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in an article titled “Transfusion of Plasma, Platelets, and Red Blood Cells in a 1:1:1 ratio vs a 1:1:2 Ratio and Mortality in Patients With Severe Trauma: The PROPPR Randomized Clinical Trial.” In summary, it was found that there was reduced risk of death due to blood loss during the first 24 hours when a ratio using more platelets and plasma was used. This group was given more units of plasma and platelets than the other group, but their bleeding was better controlled and there was no difference in death or other complications between the two groups.

“We could not have completed this study without the support of the local community. This is an extremely important study as it incorporates the lessons physicians have learned from recent overseas conflicts,” stated Medical College surgeon, Dr. David Milia. Drs Karen Brasel and Milia were the site-investigators for the Medical College of Wisconsin along with research coordinator, Pamela Walsh. Participating centers, in addition to the Medical College of Wisconsin, included UTHealth/Memorial Hermann-Texas Medical Center, the University of Alabama, the University of Arizona, the University of California, Los Angeles, the University of California, San Francisco, the University of Maryland School of Medicine, the University of Cincinnati, Oregon Health and Science University, the University of Tennessee Health Science Center, the University of Washington/Harborview Medical Center, and Sunnybrook Health Science Center in Toronto.

PROPPR is a protocol of the Resuscitation Outcomes Consortium, which is funded by the NHLBI, the U.S. Department of Defense, the Defense Research and Development Canada, and the Canadian Institute of Health Research of Circulatory and Respiratory Health.
