The Forgotten Side of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

You'll see a lot of pictures and tributes for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on the day of his national holiday. These moments are set aside to celebrate his amazing struggle and inspiring journey leading our nation out of troubled times. Yet, there was one job that often goes overlooked...being a dad.

Enjoy these wonderful pictures capturing a national hero simply being a dad to his kids.

These pictures are for those of you that feel you don't have enough time in the day to be there for your kids. You feel you don't have time after a busy day at work. You don't have time to excel in your career and be a family man. You don't have time to explore your own passions, work a full time job, and be a great parent.

Even those changing a nation and laying their life on the line find time to be with their kids.

His Childhood and Family Background

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birth home still stands in Atlanta, Georgia. King experienced racial prejudice early in life. Segregation was both law and custom in the South and other parts of America. Photograph courtesy the Library of Congress

King's paternal grandfather, James Albert King, had been a sharecropper near the small town of Stockbridge, Georgia, outside Atlanta.

Like most sharecroppers, he had worked hard and earned little. King, Sr. was the second of ten children. He had left Stockbridge for Atlanta at the age of sixteen, with nothing but a sixth-grade education and a pair of shoes.

In Atlanta he worked odd jobs and studied, and slowly developed a reputation as a preacher. While preaching at two small churches outside of Atlanta, he met Alberta Christine Williams, his future wife, and King, Jr.'s mother.

She was a graduate of Atlanta's Spelman College, had attended the Hampton Institute in Virginia, and had returned to Atlanta to teach.

Her father, the Reverend Adam Daniel Williams, presided over Atlanta's well-established Ebenezer Baptist Church.

When King, Sr. and Williams married, they moved into the Williams home on Auburn Avenue, the main street of Atlanta's African American business district.

After some time had passed, her father asked King, Sr. to serve as assistant pastor at Ebenezer, which he did. When the senior pastor died of a heart attack in 1931, King, Sr. took over his duties.

King, Jr. and his siblings were born into a financially secure middle-class family, and thus they received better educations than the average child of their race; King's

King's childhood and family background

Recognition of this undoubtedly influenced him in his decision to live a life of social protest, extending the opportunities he had enjoyed to all blacks.

In his father, King had a model of courage: King, Sr. was involved in the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, or NAACP, and had led a successful campaign to equalize the salaries of white and black teachers in Atlanta.

As a child, King's encounters with racial discrimination were mild but formative.

The first significant one came when he began school. White playmates of his were to attend a different elementary school from his, and, once the year began, their parents no longer allowed King to come over and play.

It was this instance of injustice that first led his mother to explain to him the history of slavery and segregation.

When King was in high school, he attended an oratory contest in Valdosta, Georgia, where he took second prize.

His victory was soured, however, by the long bus ride back to Atlanta: the bus was segregated, and the black people had to stand so that the white people could sit.

Thus King grew up in a family that encouraged him to notice and respond to injustices. Later in life, his father and mother would always continue to support King's choices, though they were forced at times to witness the tragic consequences of those choices, including their son's premature death.

Children of King

Excerpted from an online Newsweek article titled, "The Family Feud over Martin Luther King, Jr.'s Legacy

Dr. King Jr. waves with his children, Yolanda and Martin Luther III, from the 'Magic Skyway' ride at the Worlds Fair, New York City. The ride was a replica of a Ford convertible, August 12, 1964. HULTON ARCHIVE/GETTY

Martin Luther King Jr.'s four children didn't see their father much. While friends say he anguished over not being a stronger presence for his sons and daughters, King also believed that, as the moral leader of the civil rights movement, he had no choice but to make that sacrifice.

Still, Yolanda, Martin, Dexter and Bernice loved their father and his exuberance, which they saw in his practical jokes, his willingness to roll around on the floor with them, and the delight he took in playing what they called "the refrigerator game," where he would have the children jump into his arms from the top of the refrigerator. None of them fully comprehended what was happening around them.

Like most families in the Vine City neighborhood of Atlanta, they had little money, and yet their father was always on television. Famous people like Jackie Robinson dropped by the house.

When their father won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964, Yolanda, the oldest, was just 9 years old, while her siblings were 7, 3 and almost 2; none of the children were quite sure what this award was.

On April 4, 1968, some of the children were watching television when their show was interrupted by a news flash: Their father had been shot in Memphis. More than an hour passed before word reached their home that he had died.

Shortly after her husband's assassination, Coretta decided to create a fitting memorial, an institution designed to perpetuate his legacy by addressing social issues.

She called it the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Center, and for more than a decade she ran it out of her basement. She raised money from wealthy philanthropists and helped assemble a board of prominent leaders, who soon changed the name of the Atlanta institution to the Martin Luther King, Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, better known as simply the King Center. King left his family almost no money, but he did bequeath them one invaluable asset: his words.

He had copyrighted his writings and his speeches—including his most famous, the "I Have a Dream" speech delivered in 1963 from the steps of Washington, D.C.'s Lincoln Memorial to 250,000 people.

If anyone ever wanted to publish his writings or broadcast his speeches, they would have to pay the family for the rights.

The children were all able to go to college, thanks to the fund set up by longtime King friend and confidante Harry Belafonte.

Yolanda attended Smith College, while Bernice went to Grinnell College before graduating from Spelman, a historically black college in Atlanta.

The boys attended the alma mater of their father and grandfather, Morehouse College, a school exclusively for black men.

(PUBLICATION)
STATE OF WISCONSIN
CIRCUIT COURT
MILWAUKEE COUNTY
Case No. 15FA7834
Divorce-40101

In Re: The marriage of: RAQUEL GERENA, Petitioner and Respondent: EDWARD GERENA

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN, TO THE PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS RESPONDENT:

You are notified that the petitioner named above has filed a Petition for divorce or legal separation against you.

You must respond with a written demand for a copy of the Petition within 40 days from the day after the first day of publication.

The demand must be sent or delivered to the court at: Clerk of Court, Milwaukee County Courthouse 901 N 9th St Room 104 Milwaukee WI 53233 and to RAQUEL GERENA 5832 W STACK DR #2 MILWAUKEE WI 53219

It is recommended, but not required that you have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 45 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition, and you may lose your right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

You are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of 948.31 Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment:

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under 767.511 (1m). Wis Stats. are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in 767.105 WIs.Stats.
