Family of Dontre Hamilton files Federal civil rights lawsuit against Milwaukee, Christopher Manney

The family of Dontre Hamilton filed a federal civil rights lawsuit in Milwaukee Wednesday. The lawsuit names both former Milwaukee Police Officer Christopher Manney and the City of Milwaukee as defendants.

According to a statement released by the family, they are "seeking justice and accountability" for the death of Dontre on April 30, 2014.

The following is noted in a news release issued by Attorney Jonathan Safran:

"The Federal Complaint, which begins the lawsuit, lays out in detail the facts relating to Christopher Manney illegally shooting and killing Dontre Hamilton.

While it may take more time, we believe that this civil rights lawsuit will provide a full account of what led Manney to confront, unlawfully detain, illegally search, and then subsequently shoot Dontre fourteen times, resulting in his death."

Dontre Hamilton

The news release goes on to say the following:

"...we believe that this lawsuit will expose how many of the customs, policies and practices of the City of Milwaukee and its police department have contributed to actions of police officers in causing injuries and deaths to its citizens.

"We hope that this lawsuit leads to systemic changes within the City of Milwaukee and its police department so as to prevent future unconstitutional violations and future tragedies. No family should suffer like the family of Dontre Hamilton."

Hamilton was shot 14 times after Manney responded to a complaint of a man sleeping in the park. Manney was never charged, but he was fired after the police chief said he unnecessarily frisked Hamilton.

Milwaukee police spokesman Tim Gauerke says the department doesn't comment on pending litigation. City attorney Grant Langley also declined comment.--Article courtesy of: Fox6News and AP Wire Service

"Effective Communication-Communicating with Purpose" was the subject of a workshop presented by the African American Chamber of Commerce of Wisconsin (AACCW) at PKWARE, 201 E. Pittsburg Ave. The presenter was Denise Thomas, senior business process partner for MillerCoors. Using members of the audience to demonstrate her points, Thomas talked about the effective communication formula for leaders.

She touched on a number of communication areas as impromptu speaking, overcoming nervousness, developing listen skills, gestures, body language and vocabulary; and providing feedback, also called "The Compliment Sandwich."--Photos by Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"Now that the mayor, the president of the Common Council, the aldermen and alderwomen have been sworn in, if you could ask them a question, what would you ask them?"

"What are you going to do about jobs for the youth and young adults? Not only for the summer, but ongoing?"

Mary Walker

"This question is for all of the elected officials: 'Can we get you to get together and help rebuild Milwaukee and have minorities play a larger part in the picture, not like what has happened in the past.'"

William "Monk" Campbell

"What can we do to keep our young people from being lost in this world? They need training, skills, jobs, church, and Jesus Christ. Most of all they need love."

Beverly Williams

"What is the collective city legislative agenda and strategy for diminishing Milwaukee's racial disparity?"

PERSPECTIVES

Having Harriet Tubman on the $20 could spark a long overdue discussion on the “Peculiar Institution”

Radio talk show host Sherwin Hughes is not a fan of the decision to place abolitionist Harriet Tubman’s face on the $20 bill.

Never one to shy away from a controversial opinion, Sherwin made a compelling argument for his opposition on the selection during his radio show, “The Forum,” last week.

Sherwin says using Tubman on the currency was an insult to what she stood for.

As one of the most acclaimed conductors on the Underground Railroad in the 1850s and ‘60s, Tubman risked her life to tear down the walls of an inhumane system that was predicated on greed for the almighty dollar. The world’s most inhumane system of slavery was linked to lust for the dollar bill her face will grace in a couple of years, Sherwin said.

Moreover, Sherwin proclaimed that the dollar bill symbolizes a system of capitalism that has exploited people around the world, causing death and destruction wherever it changes hands.

Tubman would share the bill with Andrew Jackson, a slaveholder and a white Supremacist. The symbolic nature of that contrast should not be lost.

Compelling arguments? Yes! Thought provoking? On point? The right side of the coin? Nope!

I luv me some Sherwin (brotherly kind of love). He’s one of the few true brothers in Milwaukee with balls to take on a controversial subject and a golf club to get his points on the green.

He isn’t afraid to take on the status quo, to call a spade a spade (pun intended), and to throw rocks at castle walls.

I also think he’s one of the most prolific and well-researched Black commentators in America.

I agree with him 92.3% of the time. This is one of those 7.7% occasions.

There are three reasons why I am overjoyed that Tubman will break the color and party line:

The first is obvious. The selection of a woman, an African American—a former slave to boot—is long overdue.

The fight for sexual equality is almost won, and we should not forget that Tubman was one of the original advocates to lead that crusade over 100 years ago.

She is best known as the Malcolm X of her era, but she also worked alongside Susan B. Anthony, the mother of the American suffrage movement.

The bottom line, however, is that Harriet Tubman’s selection puts someone who looks like us in a prominent position in the American psyche.

You think that doesn’t matter?

SIGNIFYIN’

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

Then why have White Christians fought so hard over the centuries to promote an image of Jesus as a blond, blue eyed Caucasian?

I am exulted over Tubman’s selection for the same reason I was proud and excited when Ben Johnson became the first Black president of the Milwaukee Common Council, making him effectively, the vice mayor. I was even more excited when John Norquist resigned and Marvin Pratt became Milwaukee’s first Black mayor.

And along the racial and sexual lines, Tubman’s selection ranks—for me—up there with the publisher of this newspaper your holding, Patricia O’Flynn Pattillo, being elected the first female president of the National Newspapers Publishers Association/Black Press of America.

It’s more than symbolism.

Which takes me to the second reason for my support: Maybe the presence of an abolitionist, a courageous freedom fighter will prompt a national discussion on that “peculiar institution” and how it continues to impact “slaves” and “benefactors” a century and a half after slavery officially ended.

And maybe that discussion will result in American classroom history courses taking a subjective look at the history of this nation instead of teaching “His-story” and hypocrisy of using the motto on our currency of “In God We Trust.” God in this case is the Almighty dollar.

Harriet Tubman was born a second, third or fourth generation African captive (aka slave) somewhere around 1820 and given the “prisoner of war” name Araminta Ross.

She was born in Maryland, a northern “slave” state, which, history fails to mention was not effected by the 1863 Emancipation Proclamation.

Not well known (for not so obvious reasons) is the fact that President Abe Lincoln’s so-called executive order impacted only slaves held in Confederate states, not the northern states where slavery also existed.

(Ross changed her first name to Harriet in honor of her mother. She took on the surname Tubman from her first husband, a free Black man living for whatever reason in a slave state.)

Even as a child, Harriet resisted her captivity, and was nearly killed by a plantation owner who hit her upside the head with a steel bar when she tried to interrupt the beating of a fellow “captive.”

The “property” owner fractured Harriet’s skull, setting into motion a lifetime of seizures and narcolepsy.

Harriet thought the seizures to be visions from God, which served as the basis for her life-long sojourn as a freedom fighter. Lord only knows if she was right. The fact that she was known as the Biblical figure Moses was more than a coincidence.

If a true history course were to be taught (and it is desperately needed in schools today), it would benefit both ignorant Black children who think their ancestors were brought here on the “Good Ship Lollipop,” and Whites who believe they “saved us” from our savagery and introduced us to the benefits of “one hot and a cot.”

(That’s what they used to call the old welfare program that provided the indigent a meal and a place to stay.)

Many whites, and some culturally regressive Black folks like Ben Carson, actually believe slavery was a God approved institution (since there is no opposition to it in the Bible, and several verses actually declared for slaves to faithfully serve their owners).

And let’s not forget, as Carson told cheering White supporters during his bid for the Republican presidential nomination, that Black Africans benefitted from the horrors of slavery because it introduced them to Christianity.

(I won’t even get into that distortion, other than to say that heaven will not be a crowded place.)

In any event, after initially escaping from her “owners,” Tubman returned to the “near south” to lead family members to “freedom” in the near north.

And she returned again, and again, utilizing God given skills to avoid trackers and other bigots. No one knows for sure, but Tubman led somewhere between 300 and 3,000 slaves to what was accepted as freedom. Every trip to the plantation put her life at risk.

After the signing of the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, Tubman found it not safe to lead escaped captives to the north, but instead took a longer route on the Underground Railroad to Canada, where she lived when not venturing on her heroic escapades.

By that time, the law and plantation owners were not only seeking to capture the “Black Moses,” but to execute her for her bold crusade. A bounty of $40,000 was offered for her, and she was declared “America’s Most Wanted.”

Interestingly there are some conservatives and Libertarians who have expressed support for Tubman’s honor. Their motivations are suspect, at best, and focus on her being a Republican, which was the party of Lincoln, and philosophically far removed from the current party.

They also note she was a strong proponent of the Second Amendment (the right to own a gun), which ironically, she would have been murdered for exercising since it was illegal for a “slave” to possess a gun.

From that perspective, I wonder if Republicans would lead a discussion on Nat Turner, who also believed in God, the Republican platform and liberation through the gun?

Indeed, Tubman would not have been a follower of Martin Luther King. She not only believed in the gun for self-defense but as a valuable tool to remedy an unjust system and send to God those who mocked His words.

And Tubman made her philosophy well known, to both friend and foe. Unlike King, she didn’t waste time trying to convince the evil supporters

QUOTE OF THE WEEK:

PRINCE— The Essence Of Beauty

A tribute from Minister Louis Farrakhan

In everything that Allah (God) created, there are lessons to be learned. There is exquisite beauty in the flowers, in the rocks, in the birds, in the beasts, in the fish and this exquisite beauty that only comes from God says that Allah (God) is the Most Beautiful of those who have beauty.

All beauty is from Allah (God), who is the Author of Beauty.

The soul of the man that we know as Prince was beauty. The manifestation of his many gifts was a manifestation of beauty. The essence of his being, in the way Prince gave to others, serviced others through his gifts and skills was a thing of beauty. The creation of his songs, the majesty of their rhythms, the beauty of its content says something about the beauty of the man.

I never had the privilege of meeting this beautiful, unique human being.

When I had my first near death experience, I was in the hospital at Howard University Hospital in Washington, D.C. Prince came to see me, but I had lost so much weight and was looking so ill, some of those around me did not permit Prince to come and see me. Later, as we were organizing the Million Family March, Prince donated $50,000 to that effort. After writing him and thanking him for his gift, I tried to meet with my brother but unfortunately, I was unable to meet him.

Why Prince’s death feels so much like a personal tragedy

Thursday, the world lost an incredible artist. When I first heard the news of Prince Rogers Nelson’s passing, I was in utter disbelief (I still am). It wasn’t possible that “His Purple Highness” would no longer walk the earth and grace us with his beautiful music. He was only 57 years old.

Once his death had been confirmed, I felt paralyzed, lifeless. I knew how much Prince meant to me. I’ve known for years. I have memories of dancing to “Little Red Corvette” in a family friend’s basement. I fondly recall clumsily imitating my mother’s steps and hand gestures to “I Would Die 4 U” in the living room of our first house in East Oakland. Prince’s music spanned over 40 years, and with each changing decade, he offered a new life and sound to the world.

With the relentless social and political upheavals taking place all over the globe in the 1980s and 1990s (Reaganomics, the crack epidemic, natural disasters, apartheid’s slow death, HIV/AIDS, etc.), no other artist captured the sound and fury, the quotidian and surreal, the tranquility and the commotion of our lives; especially in that era.

I could go on and on about the multiple personas Prince inhabited over the years and how his style and performance adapted to every moment, but his transition is especially personal to me.

When I was younger, I spent so much energy trying to create distance between myself and the outside world. I am an only child, and as a kid and young adult, I was shy, introverted, and awkward. In the many moments when I felt like I couldn’t connect to or communicate with others, I relied on Prince to carry me through each day.

When I listened to Prince, I felt like I was doing something exciting, illicit, grown up. He was mesmerizing. He was so versatile. His music catered to and reflected my every mood.

Happy (“D.M.S.R.”), sad (“Purple Rain”), naughty (“Let’s Pretend We’re Married,” “Soft and Wet”), energetic (“Let’s Go Crazy”), reflective (“She’s Always in My Hair”), cheeky (“Ballad of Dorothy Parker”), jealous (“Darlin’ Nikki”), sexy (“Irresistible Bitch”), loved (“Most Beautiful Girl in the World”), bitter (“I Hate U”), passionate (“Insatiable”) and grateful (“Adore”).

Not only am I mourning his death but I am also mourning the passing of an integral part of my own life. He taught me about sex, love, passion, forgiveness, seduction, lust, denial, pain, and most importantly, loss.

His music forced me to confront myself, expose and accept my many dimensions. Through his music, I learned to carefully craft myself into a sensate being. He taught me how to be me.

From what I know of him, he was like a Pearl of Great Price, a Diamond of Matchless Beauty that everywhere the light struck him a color emitted from his being—thus the song Purple Rain became one of his great musical masterpieces. The movie, the song, the man.

I like you will miss Prince. I like you saw the Greatness in his Struggle just to gain ownership of his own name. I saw the Greatness of his Being, the courage that he had to fight for, not only his own image, his own likeness, and his own music masters but to fight for others who were not as blessed with the depth of love and the breadth of courage that he demonstrated.

As I think of my brother Prince, I think of Allah (God), the Essence of Beauty, planting that essence in him and then wrapping that essence in the flesh and the bones of the earth that speak to physical beauty through which we gained access to that essence which is the soul of the man that we called Prince.

He has returned to Him who gave Prince to us and I like all who have admired him and loved him rejoice that a man like that came this way.

Though I am saddened over the fact that I will never physically meet him, we will always have him with us through the music that he gave us, the struggle that he made that taught us how we must stand up, fearless against that which is ugly in its injustice, its unrighteousness and its wickedness.

He loved his faith. He kept the faith and fought the good fight. The Essence of Beauty remains, the beautiful flesh that wrapped that essence from head to foot is gone from us, yet beauty in a man named Prince remains.

May Allah (God) bless his family, those closest to him that helped him make his music, those who helped him in any way; may we all be comforted in our loss. But may we be joyful in the Gift that Allah (God) gave to us and to the world, the Essence of Beauty in a man called Prince.

“I knew how much Prince meant to me. I’ve known for years. I have memories of dancing to “Little Red Corvette” in a family friend’s basement. I fondly recall clumsily imitating my mother’s steps and hand gestures to “I Would Die 4 U” in the living room of our first house in East Oakland. Prince’s music spanned over 40 years, and with each changing decade, he offered a new life and sound to the world.”

In the mid- and late-1980s, while my peers and friends gushed over the smooth gesticulations of Michael Jackson, I daydreamed about running over the fanciful, animated rolling hills featured in the “Raspberry Beret” video.

While they carefully rehearsed the frenetic choreography of the “Thriller” video, I quietly memorized the lyrics to “When Doves Cry.” As they bumped mid-90s gangsta rap on their boomboxes, I whispered along to the lyrics of “I Can’t Make U Love Me” softly playing in my Sony Walkman earphones.

Prince has always been my intellectual, spiritual, sonic, musical home.

His soul-stirring music made me laugh, cry, sing, scream, dance, fight, and write about art, culture, politics and blackness.

In a lot of ways, it is really too soon for me to fully process this tragedy. I need time to start the healing process. I imagine this is how it felt when Coltrane, Miles, and Nina left. Profound sonic and cultural shifts.

It is difficult to remain careful, studious, precise, clean, when writing about something so personal, heart-wrenching and bare.

To think of his death and his music is a challenging and painful task. It is an endless and turbulent rollercoaster that toggles between agony, ecstasy, and piercing anguish.

As Daphne Brooks once said of Jeff Buckley with such honesty and beauty, “writing about him was an has always been a matter of life and death, and a struggle to honor a passionate soul whose wretchedly untimely passing somehow irrevocably altered my life.” Prince electrified my soul in immeasurable and unforgettable ways.

Diversity and tech entrepreneur Rodney Sampson to address Milwaukee Small Business week events

By Thomas E. Mitchell, Jr.

There are individuals in the Black community who believe diversity is a smokescreen to allow the continuance of white supremacy and privileged; to allow the “status-quo” to control of the level of inclusion people of color, women, and ethnicities have into the nation’s wealth producing institutions.

But noted tech entrepreneur, and corporate diversity officer Rodney Sampson says such thinking isn’t entirely right...or wrong.

Admitting there are still obstacles and underrepresentation of minorities in the tech and business fields, Sampson said there has been progress in corporate diversity.

Sampson is best known for serving as the first head of diversity at Mark Burnett Productions, executive producers of the hit ABC show, “Shark Tank.” He currently serves as chairman at Opportunity Hub; chief of diversity and inclusion initiatives at TechSquare labs; and CEO of Kingonomics.

Rodney Sampson

He is a veteran technology entrepreneur, angel investor and author of four books. He is an advisor to high growth startups such as Digit, Sandbox, Ourotech and Southern Culture Foods; growth state companies such as Mark Burnett Productions (“Shark Tank,” “The Voice,” “The Bible Series,” “Son of God,” and “A.D.”: The Bible Continues”); venture funds such as Kay Koplovitz’s Springboard Fund; and Heads of State in Namibia, Gabon and Uganda.

Currently, Sampson is head of diversity and inclusion initiatives at TechSquare Labs, a 25,000 square-foot incubator; co-working and corporate innovation space near Georgia Tech anchored by a $25 million venture fund founded by Dr. Paul Judge and Allen Nance.

Sampson will speak at Milwaukee Small Business Week, which runs from May 2 to May 6. He will speak at the city of Milwaukee’s Small Business Sustainability Conference on Monday, May 2 at Manpower corporate headquarters, 100 Manpower Place. The conference is from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

He will also speak Tuesday, May 3, at Employ Milwaukee/MAWIB, 2338 N. 27th St., from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m.

During a phone interview, Sampson pointed to the efforts of Maynard Jackson, Atlanta’s first Black mayor, who championed diversity and inclusion in major municipal projects such as the Hartsfield/Jackson International Airport, one of the biggest in the nation.

Sampson noted that the airport project, the biggest in the south at that time (the late 1970s) would not have been done if Jackson hadn’t insisted on inclusion and diversity in its design and construction.

He said true economic power for people of color is ownership not just representation, noting though Popeye’s Fried Chicken is a white corporation, a large number of its franchise owners are Black.

Though diversity helped create the Black Middle Class, Sampson said

Black America didn’t get the memo on how capitalism works. “For a long time we were the capital (slaves),” he said.

Sampson suggested Black upstart companies, especially in the tech field, not focus so much on certification, adding the new generation of entrepreneurs aren’t building their companies on certification, which he said, can be limiting.

Sampson pointed to coding students at Georgia Tech working on projects that don’t require certifications. “Companies are cutting checks for seven-figures for unproven technology, but traditional companies have to wait to be certified, and miss an opportunity.

The tech entrepreneur said technology innovation must be the focus of the Black community and Black business, suggesting that both diversity and innovation can be coupled together to drive diversity and build wealth.

Sampson is passionate about reducing the nation’s poverty and wealth gap by advancing the cause of innovation, coding, entrepreneurship and investment as a way of life for all, with an emphasis on underrepresented communities.

To advance this definitive cause, he launched the Opportunity Ecosystem. Opportunity Ecosystem includes Opportunity Hub, the nation’s largest minority owned multi-campus co-working space, entrepreneurship school, pre-accelerator and incubator headquartered in downtown Atlanta.

OHUB companies have raised more than $5 million in seed capital, and have created more than 50 high growth jobs and 125 indirect jobs in two years. OHUB is home to Opportunity Code and Cofounders College, an IT consulting and training curriculum designed to increase innovation in supplier diversity while simultaneously developing more minority coders, software engineers and technical cofounders.

In October of 2015, Opportunity Hub merged with TechSquare Labs to build out the incubator space and collectively create an even more robust, diverse and inclusive ecosystem.

Individuals who have careers in a wide variety of fields spoke to students at Longfellow School’s “Career Day” recently. Sponsored by Milwaukee Urban League Guild and Junior Achievement of Wisconsin, the event gave students the opportunity to explore possible career choices and learn how education is connected to a successful future. The professionals were assigned to classrooms where they introduced themselves, described their profession, job responsibilities, challenging aspects of the job, the school subjects crucial for their job, and materials and equipment crucial to their profession. Sen. Taylor calls for special session on juvenile corrections and more funding

MADISON – Today, State Senator Lena Taylor (D-Milwaukee) called on Governor Scott Walker to call a special session to address Wisconsin's juvenile corrections crisis, which spurred an ongoing FBI investigation. In a letter dated today, Senator Taylor urged Governor Walker to call a special session of the Legislature to take up Senate Bills 803 and 804. The first would eliminate the use of punitive solitary confinement for juveniles.

The second would transfer the Division of Juvenile Corrections from the Department of Corrections to the Department of Children and Families.

"Just like adults, when kids make mistakes, they need to pay their debt to society too," Taylor wrote in her letter to Walker. "However, we must remember that at the end of the day, they are kids. Their brains haven't fully developed... Maybe if we treated them a little more like troubled teens and a little less like hardened criminals, we would get better results."

Additionally, Taylor called for emergency funding to alleviate the overcrowding at the Milwaukee County Juvenile Detention Center. The overcrowding is a direct result of Wisconsin's failure to properly care for the kids at the state's juvenile facility, which has caused Milwaukee County judges to sentence more kids to the county facility rather than the state facility. Kids are being forced to sleep on the floor and employees are being forced to work long hours.

"We don't need our own Lincoln Hills scandal at home in Milwaukee," said Taylor. "Our state's failure to address this problem caused this overcrowding and it's time Governor Walker stepped up with some emergency funds to solve this problem before it becomes another scandal."

Taylor is a former chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee and a current member of the same committee. She and Senator Fred Risser issued a letter to the committee calling for a public hearing into the Lincoln Hills scandal on December 16, 2015. She has organized multiple trips to Lincoln Hills to show the kids and workers support during this crisis and has been in communication with local Milwaukee County officials about the juvenile corrections crisis as well.

"It is easier to build strong children than to repair broken men."

Kappa Alpha Psi Foundation of Southeastern Wisconsin, Inc. To Award Scholarships At It's Annual "Dare To Dream" Krimson Scholarship Ball

On Saturday, May 21, 2016 the Kappa Alpha Psi Foundation of Southeastern Wisconsin, Inc. will host "Dare To Dream" Krimson Scholarship Ball at the Crowne Plaza Hotel, 6401 S. 13th St.

The event from 5:30 pm – 12:00 am will include a silent auction, and dinner, along with dancing and music provided by the Joe Jordan Band.

During the event the foundation will award ten (10) - $1,000 scholarships to deserving Southeastern Wisconsin area high school students.

The Kappa Alpha Psi Foundation of Southeastern Wisconsin, Inc., a 501(c) (3) organization, is committed to education and community service.

The Foundation's mission is to improve the quality of life of disadvantaged youth and communities in Southeastern Wisconsin.

One aspect of our mission is to help make college attendance more accessible through scholarship opportunities.

Since its inception 15 years ago, the Foundation has recognized the academic achievements of deserving Southeastern Wisconsin students awarding over $100,000 in academic scholarships and other college essentials toward their undergraduate education.

of the immoral practice of slavery to atone and repent.

Instead, she believed in justice and freedom by any means necessary, and she carried a gun to bust a cap in the oppressor's behind, and one in the behind of any "slave" who jeopardized the escape.

She once was quoted as saying she wouldn't hesitate to kill one of the slaves she risked her life for if they jeopardized her mission, either through fear or ignorance.

"I freed thousands. I could have freed thousands more if they knew they were slaves," she once said.

"There was one of two things I had a right to, liberty, or death; if I could not have one, I would have the other, for no man should take me alive. I should fight for my liberty as long as my strength lasted, when the time came for me to go, the Lord would let them take me," (after a fight).

A new history lesson, or at a minimum a national discussion on Tubman, would venture into why God would justify her willingness to kill the enemy. Man has a right to be free, and those who block that God given right are no better than the devil.

Harriet subscribed to violence as a mechanism to end apartheid. In fact, she assisted John Brown in organizing the Harper Ferry raid that was to be a precursor to an armed rebellion to end slavery.

And during the civil war, she actually led a troop of Colored Troops in a military campaign, the Combahee River Raid that resulted in over 700 South Carolina slaves being rescued. Those who stood in the way of freedom were rolled over like a mighty storm.

Hopefully, by studying the woman whose face will grace the $20 bill, a generation of students will learn about the tainted history, the exploitation of Africans and Native Americans and how the West was really won.

Maybe that history, long distorted, rewritten and made into a cartoon where even evil men appear as heroes, will be used to explain how America developed into a world power that is feared or hated by all but those who receive aid or our protection.

From that perspective, having Andrew Jackson moved to the back of the $20 is appropriate.

Jackson, whose most long lasting claim to fame wasn't defending New Orleans from the British but of signing into law the Indian Removal Act, which legalized the racist treatment and displacement of hundreds of thousands of Native Americans to bring to fruition "Manifest Destiny."

Jackson, himself a slave owner, once led the U.S. Army to murder entire tribes of Native Americans and escaped slaves who had fled to Florida.

Having him on the other side of the bill is ripe for discussion.

Moreover, maybe an examination of slavery will uncover the link between those slaves of yesteryear who accepted their bondage and inhumanity and those who shoot up our neighborhoods today.

An examination of what Tubman fought against will reveal the roots of White privilege and even police tactics, specifically the extension of the Fugitive Slave Act and racial profiling.

Lastly, who knows, maybe—just maybe—every time one of those billionaires who own 90% of everything, looks down at his stack of 20s and sees Harriet Tubman staring back at him, they will feel a tinge of guilt that will lead to a philanthropic action.

Maybe Bernie Sanders will be elected president and pose with the $20 bill as he introduces an executive order equalizing the playing field, raising taxes on the zillionaires who pay nothing while half of the population barely make ends meet.

Sorry Sherwin, maybe you're not wrong on this point, but you surely ain't right. I can't wait to get my first Harriet Tubman dollar so I can put it up on my wall. Or, better yet, spend it at a Black business. HOTEP.

Milwaukee Film Announces Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Grant

Festival Among 16 FilmWatch Grant Recipients; Received $10,000 in Cash for Black Lens Program

MILWAUKEE –Milwaukee Film received a $10,000 FilmWatch grant in support of its Black Lens Program from the Academy Foundation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Milwaukee Film is one of 16 FilmWatch grant recipients for the 2016-2017 grants year. The highly competitive FilmWatch grant program supports curated screening sections at North America-based film festivals, film societies, and other film-related organizations. A total of $205,000 was awarded in this category for the 2016-2017 grants year.

As part of the annual film festival, Milwaukee Film offers its Black Lens programming track, a selection of film programs exemplifying outstanding cinematic work by contemporary African American filmmakers. In 2015, Black Lens film screenings attracted a total audience of 3,288 (a 96% increase over 2014), with an estimated 28% African American attendees.

"Milwaukee Film receiving financial support from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is an incredible honor," says Jonathan Jackson, Milwaukee Film's Artistic and Executive Director. "It is particularly meaningful that the support is directed toward our burgeoning Black Lens Program, which is a vital and rare showcase dedicated to exclusively presenting the work of African American directors."

By foregrounding the work of emerging and established African American filmmakers annually in the film festival, Milwaukee Film's goal is to provide an outlet that gathers a diverse audience of Milwaukeeans to discuss issues concerning

African Americans through fictional and non-fictional film narratives – an important dialogue to have in a city with such ingrained segregation. Black Lens co-programmer Geraud Blanks explains, "The grant from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences serves not only as national recognition of the important work being done by Milwaukee Film, but confirms initiatives such as Black Lens are an essential part of engaging diversity in a real and substantive way."

The Black Lens Program provides festival-level exposure for African American filmmakers nationwide, while also serving a local audience who has limited access to critically-acclaimed films outside of mainstream circulation.

"Going into our third year, we are poised to contribute greatly to the Milwaukee Film Festival and to the city in general in terms of the films we want to screen, the filmmakers and actors we want to invite, and the conversations we want to generate," says Black Lens co-programmer Donte McFadden.

Milwaukee Film is now accepting submissions for the 2016 Milwaukee Film Festival (September 22 - October 6). The entry form and complete information is available at <http://mke-film.org/call-for-entries>.

In Re: The marriage of BRENDA BARNETT, Petitioner and Respondent BERNARD BARNETT

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN, TO THE PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS RESPONDENT
You are notified that the petitioner named above has filed a Petition for divorce or legal separation against you.

You must respond with a written demand for a copy of the Petition within 40 days from the day after the first date of publication.

The demand must be sent or delivered to the court at: Clerk of Court Milwaukee County Courthouse 901 N. 9th St. ROOM 104 Milwaukee WI 53233and to BRENDA BARNETT 2831 NORTH SHERMAN BLVD MILWAUKEE WI 53210

It is recommended, but not required, that you have attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 45 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition and you may lose your right to object anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

You are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of 948.31, Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment.

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under 767.511(1m), Wis. Stats., are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in 767.105, Wis. Stats.

767.105 Information from Circuit Court Commissioner.
(2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order under sec. 767.59 or 767.451:
(a) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall, with or without charge provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:
1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.
2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.
3. Community resources and family court counseling services available to assist the parties.
4. The procedure for setting modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.
(b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase with a copy of the statutory provisions in this chapter generally pertinent to the action.

In Re: The marriage of CONNIE RAE HANKINS , Petitioner and Respondent WAYNE LYDELL HANKINS

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN, TO THE PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS RESPONDENT
You are notified that the petitioner named above has filed a Petition for divorce or legal separation against you.

You must respond with a written demand for a copy of the Petition within 40 days from the day after the first date of publication.

The demand must be sent or delivered to the court at: Clerk of Court Milwaukee County Courthouse 901 N. 9th St. ROOM 104 Milwaukee WI 53233and to CONNIE HANKINS 2335 WEST WISCONSIN AVE #1 MILWAUKEE WI 53233

It is recommended, but not required, that you have attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 45 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition and you may lose your right to object anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

You are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of 948.31, Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment.

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under 767.511(1m), Wis. Stats., are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in 767.105, Wis. Stats.
