QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"What qualities do you think a person has to have to be a teacher today?"

"Today's teacher must be compassionate; willing to build relationships with students and families. They must be life-long learners and have a strong belief in the children they serve and their ability to achieve at high levels."

Tonya Adair

"To be an impactful teacher you must possess a great attitude and be willing to go that extra mile to know your students. If you believe in them, they will believe in themselves."

Angelena Terry

"Empathy, not sympathy. Passion, endurance, inspiration, (a) tough skin and a 'why' over 'how'."

Kwabena Nixon

"Teachers should have a love for children and a passion for what they do. They are parents outside of a child's home and have a lot of influence in their lives. Teachers are special people and we should treat them that way!"

Event marks 27th annual walk supporting Milwaukee's Next Door organization

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend this year's Walk for Children Saturday, May 14th. The event supports Next Door, an award-winning provider of early childhood education in Milwaukee's Central City since 1969. The agency also offers valuable parent services to help the entire family succeed.

This year, we are thrilled to welcome Green Bay Packers Safety, HaHa Clinton-Dix, to lead the one-mile walk. Registration opens at 9 a.m. at Next Door's Headquarters at 2545 N. 29th Street. The walk begins at 10 a.m.

"Playing for a Wisconsin team, I want to give back to the state that has given me so much," Clinton-Dix said. "Joining Next Door is an honor because they do such important work to help kids in need get ready for school and life."

Adults who attend the walk can enter a free raffle to win a "Selfie" with Clinton-Dix. A separate raffle for children will feature tricycles as the prize.

Next Door will also debut its Books for Kids Mobile Library at the walk. Children can stop by and select a free book to take home. Next Door wants to thank the Harley-Davidson Motor Company for donating the Mobile Library, which we will use throughout the year to deliver books to all of our sites. Other walk festivities include children's games, live music from Milwaukee's Eddie Butts Band and free lunch for registered participants.

President of Milwaukee Urban League urges County Board to approve funding for Office on African American Affairs

On May 19th, the County Board's Finance, Personnel & Audit Committee will be meeting to vote on whether to fund the newly created Office on African American Affairs. I recently sent a letter to every member of that Committee urging them to approve the County Executive's request to fund the Office.

Many of us in the African American community feel that approval of this item is vitally important because it will provide greatly needed funding for the new Milwaukee County Office on African American Affairs.

The Office was created by the Board and County Executive to address the "County's racial inequities for the benefit of all of its citizenry, and for the region to achieve its full potential."

The mission is ambitious, and the County will need dedicated staff to succeed in the work of making this Office successful. The Board and County Executive set aside monies for Office staff in the 2016 County budget. Previous attempts by the County Executive to transfer these monies to the Office, however, have not yet been approved by the Board.

I have discussed the critical issues facing the African American community with County Executive Abele and have confidence in his ability to lead a collective effort to help address these challenges.

Whether its workforce development, transportation, criminal justice reforms or other disparities; the work of the Office on African American Affairs has a genuine opportunity to make a positive difference on the issues confronting the African American Community.

The County Executive has made it clear that focusing attention on the African American community is one of his highest priorities. He understands that our Milwaukee County metropolitan area cannot reach its full potential unless all parts of our community can thrive and be successful. I know that some have questioned whether the County Executive is serious about his intentions to aggressively address the African American community issues or whether he was just making statements to win an election. ever, his actions speak louder than words and I am convinced that he is determined to build an Office on African American Affairs that can tackle our disparity issues in an impactful, measurable, long-term manner.

I support County Executive Abele on his efforts to obtain funding for the Office of African American Affairs and hope the honorable members of the County Board will vote to help ensure the Office can succeed in its mission. The County Executive has demonstrated the sense of urgency that our leaders must have on this issue, and I hope that the County Board is able to make that same demonstration by funding the Office on African American Affairs.

Exam of our collapsed institutions worthy of a museum exhibit

I rejoiced when I heard last week that there is a possibility America's Black Holocaust Museum may soon reopen.

Not just because I worked with its founder, James Cameron, and thus knew of his ambition to keep alive the museum that brought to Milwaukee and America the atrocities that shaped this country and continue to mold Black America.

The museum closed nearly a decade ago. As with other historic Black institutions, various government and philanthropic entities, including the city, promised, at the time, they would work to reopen it if for no other reason than its status as an anchor for the Bronzeville project.

But, you know what usually happens when the government promises stuff to Black people...

But a development project that will receive WHEDA funds has opened the door for a new home for the museum, thus returning it to a physical existence versus its current digital/online state.

I've visited the website, but it didn't do justice to actual viewing of artifacts and images of the "Great Maafa," which Cameron, the only known survivor of a lynching, hoped to bring to light.

SIGNIFYIN'

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

The author, philosopher and educator conceived a museum that would bring awareness to the Great Maafa—from the shores of the Motherland, to his survival of a lynching attempt during his youth in Indiana, to his discovery of a Klu Klux Klan outfit found in a house near Villard Avenue a few decades ago.

Cameron's vision was to educate African Americans about our survival amid apartheid, including some of the worse atrocities inflicted on a people simply because of the color of our skin.

The Holocaust Museum, which some Whites found offensive because it was a reminder of their ancestors' role in the atrocities that put a stain on America's great promise.

We desperately need the museum, not just to remind and inform White folks, but also to educate sleeping and ignorant Black people about where we came from—and what we continue to go through—and how we survived.

But, my jubilation was not merely because Cameron's dream may soon be restored, but also because its resurrection may spark a new museum addition that highlights the last decade during which a significant number of Black institutions and businesses were swallowed up during a socioeconomic tsunami, that may some day be viewed as a socioeconomic holocaust of sorts.

Seems like one day we were controlling key organizations that empowered Black residents through services and programs.

We wrote out checks from one of two locally owned Black banks. We ate at one of a half dozen Black restaurants and Black arts groups entertained us.

We spent every first weekend of August at the lakefront, enjoying and immersed in our unique cultural offerings at the premiere African ethnic event in America.

But then we woke up and they were gone, some through their own ineptitude or corruption, others as a result of a political paradigm shift.

And others as a byproduct of a coordinated effort to not only shift resources to non-Black entities, but to introduce Band Aides for the myriad of Black problems while creating jobs for White missionaries who would become poverty pimps.

Who knew that they offered a college course called "Poverty Pimpology 101"?

The college course—offered at several "liberal arts" colleges, was an introduction to an insidious scheme that keeps the poor poor, undermines African American culture and keeps "victims" dependent upon services that make them comfortable in their misery.

The true beneficiaries of this scheme are the organizational employees, many suburban and supposedly liberal whites, mostly white liberals who would probably never venture into the central city were it not for a payday—and I'm not talking about the candy bar.

Those of us who paid attention and recognized the ramifications of the demise of Black entities tried to warn

FoodShare Employment and Training (FSET) and the Myth of the Undeserving Poor

Article by XAR 1060 via the Casa Cry online newsletter of Casa Maria Catholic Worker

Dorothy Day famously said "The Gospel takes away our right forever, to discriminate between the deserving and the undeserving poor." Sadly, Wisconsin state policymakers have been manufacturing and deploying weapons in their war on the poor.

Their effectiveness is in the ability to embed the idea of a worthy/unworthy distinction in the public mind while placing as many people as possible into the later category. For the last year, the FoodShare Employment and Training Program (FSET) has distinguished itself as the a-bomb of this specialized arsenal.

FSET has been around for years. Its purpose is to help people who receive FoodShare find work through assisting job searches and providing training and supportive services.

While some people have found employment through the program, many enroll in the program to get a free bus pass. It may not have been helping as many individuals enter or advance in the workforce as the middle and upper class hoped, but it was not a means of punishing those who lack privilege.

This changed on April 1, 2015, when a work requirement for FoodShare eligibility took effect. Since that day, individuals ages 18 to 49 who are physically and mentally able to work and don't have dependent children have to prove to the state they're doing at least 80 hours per month of work-related activity.

Those who work at least half-time can fulfill the requirement through their employment, and the rest can either fulfill it through FSET participation or receive three months of FoodShare benefits and then become FoodShare ineligible for three years.

Against my better judgment I took a position working for ResCare, Inc, the for-profit human services firm contracted by the state to administer the FSET program in Milwaukee and six other counties in southeastern Wisconsin. I was not unaware that the new policy would lead to individuals losing FoodShare.

But, I naively thought I'd be helping others to improve their lives through employment (as if selling one's waking hours to an employer is an improvement!), or at least maintain their FoodShare eligibility through FSET participation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was written by an individual at first believed to have an association with the state's FoodShare Employment and Training (FSET) program and ResCare, Inc. a for-profit human services firm contracted by the state of Wisconsin to oversee the program in Milwaukee and six other counties in Southeastern Wisconsin. Further investigation revealed the writer of this article is not associated with ResCare as first believed because of the byline, which is a code used by the company to identify an employee. Though we use the XAR1060 byline for this article, we are also crediting the source of the story, Casa Cry, an online newsletter for Casa Maria Catholic Worker, a grass-roots ministry that is part of the Catholic Worker movement started in New York City in 1933 by Dorothy Day and Peter Maurin. The Milwaukee ministry was started in 1966 by Annette and Michael Cullen. It is located at 1131 N. 21st St. The ministry focuses on women and children in need of short-term housing, refugees and asylum seekers, and families with longer-term needs. Casa Maria Catholic Worker also participates in protests and other social justice campaigns that contribute to the well-being of society, as well as experimenting in urban gardening.

Could Ben Carson be Donald Trump's VP running mate?

By Richard G. Carter
Burt Lancaster, "Sweet Smell of Success" (1957)

According to an old saying, "politics makes strange bedfellows." Thus, might Dr. Ben Carson be Donald Trump's vice presidential running mate? Or, if he were to be elected, might Trump appoint Carson as Secretary of Health and Human Services?

As distasteful as it is, the bombastic billionaire businessman is now a lock as the Republican nominee for president of the United States. And ironically, Carson now is helping to vet potential candidates in Trump's search for a running mate.

Carson may be supporting Trump -- who dissed him with the other GOP candidates -- because Trump stood up for him during the Iowa primary when the campaign of Texas Sen. Ted Cruz falsely hinted to voters in each precinct that Carson had dropped out.

So with the guessing game going full blast, might Trump select a Black or Latino for the second spot on his ticket? Given his reputation as insensitive to racial minorities and women, this is the operative question.

A primary example was the case of New York City's infamous Central Park jogger rape of April 19, 1989. Trump called for the death penalty for five Black and Latino teens accused -- but innocent -- of raping a 28-year-old White woman.

On May 1, 1989, Trump, paid $85,000 for a scurrilous, 600-word, full-page-ad in four Manhattan daily newspapers. But after spending eight-to-13 years in prison, the youths were exonerated and their convictions thrown out when the real rapist confessed. They filed a wrongful conviction suit against the city, seeking $250 million. After they were awarded $41-million in 2014, Trump sprung into action.

True to his leanings, Trump objected to the city's financial settlement with the five young men, despite their innocence having been proven. "My opinion on settlement of the Central Park Jogger case is that it's a disgrace," he said. "A detective close to the case, and who has followed it since 1989, calls it 'the heist of the century.'" Ugh!

Fast forward to 2016 and, despite his crazy ideas, Trump is the party's standard bearer vs. Hillary Clinton in November -- a scenario none of us could have imagined. Seeking to temper his reputation as a bigot, he may choose a Black or Latino VP running mate.

Enter the retired Dr. Carson -- a 64-year-old, ex-Republican presidential candidate who, unlike Trump, has always enjoyed a high favorable rating. To the surprise of many, Carson has endorsed Trump and speaks on his behalf at selected campaign events.

Editor's Note: Though this article mentions Dr. Carson as part of Trump's transition team, a recent report has Carson announcing he is NOT a part of the GOP front runner's transition team.

What would Carson add as number two on a Trump ticket? Well, his laid-back, intellectual persona would contrast to the brusque Trump. And his professional credentials would be difficult for Hillary's expected all-White Democrat ticket to match.

The foremost event of Carson's sterling, up-from-the-bootstraps career occurred in 1987 when, as a Johns Hopkins pediatric neurosurgeon, he was the first doctor in the world to successfully separate conjoined (Siamese) twins at the brain. In 2008, he was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

As a high-profile, Black Republican, Carson's name would bring his own numerous supporters across racial lines. Prior to dropping out of the presidential race, his no-nonsense campaign attracted a wide spectrum of Americans. In addition, a Trump-Carson ticket could attract Black voters who, for decades, have been in lock-step for Democrats.

While the soft-spoken Carson offers a breath-of-fresh-air contrast to the boisterous Trump, he demonstrated a feisty side in the initial, August 6, 2015 debate on Fox News Channel, when he felt disrespected after rarely being called on. When finally asked a question near the end, he sarcastically -- and righteously -- told the moderators he wondered if he'd ever get an opportunity to speak. And the crowd loved it.

Indeed, Carson's 2015 campaign stature was boosted by measured performances in the first two nationally televised GOP debates. While most of the other dozen-plus candidates relentlessly hammered each other, he confidently kept his composure, got off a couple of memorable phrases -- and looked calm, cool and collected.

Yet, Carson's controversial remarks last September on NBC's "Meet the Press" drew lots of news media fire. He was asked: "Do you believe Islam is consistent with the Constitution?" His reply: "No. I would not advocate that

Pentecost Sunday

My Sisters and Brothers, the scripture readings assigned for Pentecost this year are: Acts 2: 1-11, Romans 8: 8-17, and John 14: 15-16, 23b-26. The message of all three readings is clear: The Holy Spirit fills all Christians and all become children of God and the same Holy Spirit teaches all.

We often call this Feast the Birthday of the Church. We no longer hide behind locked doors, but we boldly preach Good News to the people.

The reading from Acts shows us the reversal of the story of Babel in Genesis, when the building of the stairway to heaven was thwarted by causing people to no longer understand each other. The building stopped.

Here, in Acts, the fact that people spoke different languages didn't thwart the preaching of Good News to every language, every people. The whole world could now understand the preaching of Good News of salvation.

Paul reminds us that the gift of the Holy Spirit gives us life. "If the Spirit of God who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, he who raised Christ from the dead will give life to your mortal bodies also through his Spirit that dwells in you."

John has Jesus say that the Father will give us an "Advocate" once He leaves us. And that Spirit will be with us forever.

To do what? Certainly the Spirit is not for our own keeping. The "Jesus and me forever and ever" fallacy is not why Jesus came into this world.

Yes, personal devotion is necessary and helps deepen our love of Jesus. But the only way we can truly love, however, is to give it away. The more we really believe we are loved by God, the more we will be urged to share that love.

I think one of the best representatives of how God's love works, is Pope Francis. You can tell that he knows deep down that a merciful and forgiving God loves him. An he is forced then to give that love away, especially to the poor and those now displaced from their homeland by war and genocide.

Pope Francis gets it after a life of trying to figure it out, just as we have to do.

Since this blog is written for the Milwaukee Community Journal, let me speak to my sisters and brothers in Milwaukee.

You have your work cut out for you. The amount of violent crime, the amount of poverty and lack of hope that exists sometimes not too far from your own home, needs the love of God as only you can deliver it.

Get involved. The issue of police-community relations, unbelievable numbers of African Americans still in Wisconsin prisons, Black Lives Matter, failing schools, and just huge numbers of poor and homeless people, all come under the urgent call to love and help make things right.

Empowered by the Holy Spirit, the great gift given to us at our Baptism and Confirmation, we are equipped to bring Good News to those now seem to have none.

Happy Birthday Church!

Our collapsed institutions worthy of a museum exhibit

folks, but either out of political blindness or ignorance, our cries fell upon deaf ears.

OIC, CYD, Urban Day School, Inner City Arts Council, African World Festival, and you may as well add to the list the Legislative Black and Hispanic Caucus. Like smoke from one of those vapor cigarettes (or the blunts I see too many Black teens smoking), they were gone.

And the lost businesses? Legacy and North Milwaukee State Bank top the list. And what about Stellas, Fred Jones' car dealership, IHOP, Lincoln Mobile...the list goes on, and on and on.

You could weep a few tears over the lost revenues flowing out of the Black community, but my heart also goes out to the lost jobs and opportunities at both non-profit and for-profit entities.

The demise of OIC (Opportunities Industrialization Center) stung the deepest.

Not only have hundreds of jobs been lost, including several scores of professional positions, but also millions of dollars have been redirected away from our community to the suburbs, or other "minority" neighborhoods.

With little uproar, and even less anger by Black politicians who were elected to safeguard those institutions, the cornerstones of our community went the way of movie theaters and roller rinks in the central city.

Some of those institutions committed suicide of sorts. OIC imploded in a cloud of corruption. Several people went to prison before the cloud rescinded.

But there was more to that story. OIC was the primary funder of several cultural endeavors, including important media components and the African World Festival.

OIC also served as one of the state's largest training grounds for Black professionals, whose services and expertise empowered dozens of smaller groups and hundreds of individuals.

It is not a coincidence that most of those Black professionals had to move outside Milwaukee and the state to find employment commiserate with their valuable skills.

That was both a result of Milwaukee's historic hostility to upward mobility for African Americans, as well as the culture of the non-profit sector, which allows few people of color through their locked doors.

There's another part of that story that has escaped public scrutiny.

None of them were involved in the corruption at OIC, a soap opera of fraud and venality that included kickbacks and misappropriation of funds and other vices that resulted in several indictments and the imprisonment of a powerful Black politician.

When the smoke cleared on OIC's implosion, the umbrella organization was on the auction block, thousands of poor were left without services, and dozens of Black professionals were left unemployed.

For many the story ended on that tragic note. But what happened next was even more alarming.

Tyrone Dumas was named interim director in an attempt to save the organization. I helped with a plan to reorganize the board, restructure the organization, and introduce a partnership with city, county and state government. Surprisingly (or maybe not so) the only politician to agree to work to keep OIC alive

"...when SDC lost its Head Start contract to another agency, it had a snowball affect that is still reverberating. SDC contracted with several Black agencies—serving Black people—including Northcott Neighborhood House and Urban Day School. Northcott is suffering, and Urban Day is closing as a result."

was the Republican county executive. The Democratic mayor and governor turned their backs and not by coincidence OIC's various programs were divided up among White agencies.

OIC's demise, the shift in resources and control of poverty programming didn't stop there. Harambee Ombudsman lost funding to a White agency that told funders it could do a better job running programs for Black Milwaukeeans than Black administrators. White arts organizations followed that paradigm and took funds away from the Inner City Arts Council and Ko-Thi.

CYD (Career Youth Development) found itself in a similar situation. With the death of its founder, the politically connected Jeannetta Robinson, the powers-that-be quickly vamped on CYD and before you could blink your eyes...poof, it was defunded and its programs shifted to missionary agencies.

The political scheme to reward its liberal white supporters was foretold when a major anti-pregnancy grant targeting Black teens was awarded to a White suburban agency that admitted it didn't have employees willing to work in the central city.

The solution? Subcontract with some of the same Black agencies they took the money from.

Don't be confused by what is going on here.

It is no coincidence that SDC (the Social Development Commission) has lost its largest grants for poverty programs to White and Hispanic agencies.

Further note, when SDC lost its Head Start contract to another agency, it had a snowball affect that is still reverberating. SDC contracted with several Black agencies—serving Black people—including Northcott Neighborhood House and Urban Day School. Northcott is suffering, and Urban Day is closing as a result.

Neither found a receptive ear from the agency that took over the Head Start program.

Observers who are not tied to a political party that sustains the poverty pimp paradigm, or who have no financial stake in the non-profit community, see this phenomena for what it is: a two sided coin that does not bode well for the Black community.

Some of the financial shift is based on capturing financial resources to sustain organizations. White agencies generally come out on top because they have the connections, the resources and the political backing.

As resources (spelled poverty program grants) started to dwindle a decade ago when Republicans controlled the legislature, competition for the dollars intensified and Black agencies came out on the short end of the stick.

The other side of the coin is more ominous. Some of those agencies have as their mission appeasement, making the poor comfortable in poverty; versus empowering them to left themselves out of their circumstances.

The lesson here is that the missionary agencies need poverty to continue in order to make money. To empower the poor is to work yourself out of business.

The Democratic Party, unfortunately, has been a partner in this crime. That's why whenever a proposal is introduced to empower the poor, our "friends" and "benefactors," shoot it down, telling us they know what's good for us.

And since Black politicians are almost exclusively Democrats, most sing those lyrics without understanding the melody.

Some observers believe the school choice controversy provided an example of this social dichotomy. The program, at its very essence, is about resources, and who should control them, the edocracy—teachers union—or parents, who can control where to send their children (like parents with income do, including Barack Obama).

Some Black parents chose to abandon the public school system (taking their tax money with them) for the private schools because they felt those schools better educated their children and empowered them to boot.

Now, interestingly, more and more White run schools are dominating the school choice system. That's not to say they aren't performing, but here again, you find few Black administrators in charge.

A similar scenario could be said of Black businesses. Competition is at the core of capitalism, so it is not surprising that many Black businesses are overrun by large White corporations.

A case can also be made that most of the Black businesses that went under of late—particularly Legacy and North Milwaukee State Banks, died from self-inflicted wounds (with ammunition supplied by a failing economy, and Wall Street collapse).

Our corner grocers sold out to foreign interests, and the restaurants may have died due to poor marketing and poor business decisions.

It cannot be over looked, however, that Milwaukee, despite being a minority majority city, does not have a business participation program, nor does local government prioritize Black business development and sustainability. That's why the best-kept non-secret is that scores of relocated Black businesses find success elsewhere.

If we want to slow the demise of Black institutions, or provide a blueprint for business success and community empowerment, we need to study where we've been and how we got here. And since that story would best be an exhibit of tragedy and deceit, political intrigue and backstabbing, the Black Holocaust Museum would be an appropriate place to house it.

Residents urged to schedule appointments to apply for assistance prior to May 15.

The Milwaukee County Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS)'s Energy Assistance Program deadline is quickly approaching. Eligible residents must schedule an appointment to apply prior to May 15 to receive the benefits of the program.

"We are pleased to have served more than 56,000 households to date with this year's program," says DHHS Director Héctor Colón. "While the state is down in applications this year due to the warmer winter, Milwaukee County is continuing to increase the number of households served by this program. We are very proud to provide this service to ease the burden of utility bills for our residents in need."

The Wisconsin Home Energy Assistance Program, also known as WHEAP, is a state program that is administered in Milwaukee County by DHHS. WHEAP provides a one-time payment for eligible residents, covering a portion of their energy costs.

Eligible residents can schedule appointments to apply for WHEAP prior to May 15, 2016. They can call 414-270-4-MKE, or going online to www.energyassistancecmke.org. South - 2701 S Chase Ave (between Lincoln and Oklahoma)

The Energy Assistance Program has also expanded phone service capacity to accommodate the increase in applicants scheduling appointments over the phone as an effort to decrease wait time in lines at locations.

For residents who are unable to schedule appointments prior to May 15, they may still be eligible for crisis services. To get more information, these residents should call 414-270-4-MKE, or visit our website at www.energyassistancecmke.org after May 15 to learn about their options for assistance outside of the energy assistance period.

YOUTH & EDUCATION

Daniel Cruz Lattimore Awarded $8,000 Counseling Fellowship From NBCC and Affiliates

The NBCC Foundation, an affiliate of the National Board for Certified Counselors (NBCC), recently selected Daniel Cruz Lattimore of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, for the NBCC Minority Fellowship Program-Youth (MFP-Y).

As an NBCC MFP-Y fellow, Lattimore will receive funding and training to support his education and facilitate his service to underserved minority populations, with a specific focus on transition-age youth (ages 16-25).

The NBCC MFP-Y is made possible by a grant awarded to NBCC by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) in September 2014.

The Foundation is contracted by NBCC to administer the NBCC MFP-Y, as well as training and collaboration activities, such as webinars, that are open to all National Certified Counselors (NCCs).

The goal of the program is to reduce health disparities and improve behavioral health care outcomes for racially and ethnically diverse populations by increasing the number of available culturally competent behavioral health professionals.

Daniel Cruz Lattimore

The NBCC MFP will distribute $8,000 education awards to Lattimore and the 30 other master's-level counseling students selected to receive the fellowship award.

Lattimore is a graduate of the University of South Florida, in Tampa, and is currently pursuing a master's degree in the clinical mental health counseling program at Marquette University, in Milwaukee.

Upon graduation, Lattimore will enter a doctoral program to cultivate his interests in positive psychology, resilience, and therapeutic humor.

He will aim to work with minority populations in university, workplace, and community settings, primarily with people of color.

Being awarded this fellowship will allow Lattimore to broaden his multicultural knowledge, increase his capacity for empathy, strengthen his versatility in treating underserved people, travel to conferences, network with professionals within the field, and establish platforms for social justice.

The Foundation plans to open the next NBCC MFP-Y application period in September 2016. To learn more about the NBCC MFP and its fellows, please visit www.nbccf.org.

MPS Asked to Say YES to Protect Public Schools

Opportunity Schools Partnership Program Launches Website to Inform Public on Proposal to Keep Funds, Students, and Employees in MPS

Milwaukee County Executive Chris Abele and Dr. Demond Means, commissioner of the Opportunity Schools Partnership Program created by state legislature last summer, are reaffirming their commitment to protecting Milwaukee Public Schools with a proposal that would retain enrollment at MPS schools, and the associated millions of dollars within the district, while also protecting MPS jobs.

The proposal ensures that 1) teachers and employees at struggling schools would retain their status as MPS employees, while retaining high licensing standards, ensuring they remain members of their union and keep their MPS employee benefits, including healthcare and retirement; 2) students would remain enrolled in MPS; and 3) per-pupil funding received from the state would be returned back to MPS.

Another key component of the proposal is a commitment to implementing a community schools model. Some schools within MPS are already utilizing a community schools model, in partnership with the United Way.

It is our goal to use this same model to learn best practices from these schools and others around the country that have been successful in improving outcomes and making their school the center of a thriving community.

This model engages families and community members as integral pieces of the puzzle in setting high goals for educational performance, providing support for educators, and in achieving success in school and in life. This model can also address issues outside of the classroom that impact performance in the classroom, such as mental health, transit, housing, and economic security by wrapping services around children and their families.

MPS now has a choice. They can say YES to keeping OSPP schools public and retaining funding within MPS or, if they say NO, in order to comply with the law, the schools will be taken from the district and millions of dollars will be lost.

MPS is being asked to come to the table to work out an agreement for saving public schools, teacher jobs and student enrollment in MPS, while attracting more resources and support to turn around low performing schools.

"A partnership with Milwaukee Public Schools would allow us to put more resources and support into the district, without disrupting MPS students or employees," County Executive Chris Abele said. "I urge MPS to come to the table and work out an intergovernmental agreement with us that will prevent millions of dollars from being lost. Losing this funding unnecessarily puts the rest of the district at risk."

Regarding school participation in the OSPP program, the county executive has confirmed several times over the past few months that he would commit to just one school entering into the OSPP program for the first year.

He and Dr. Means have confirmed again to MPS that the proposal they have submitted is for just one school to enter the OSPP program. While they wish to partner with MPS in identifying which one school that is, both Dr. Means and the county executive utive are not willing to consider implementing OSPP in a school already using a community schools model.

"The issues impacting low-performing schools are too complex and too entrenched for any one entity to fix on its own," Dr. Demond Means said.

"We all care about our public schools and want our kids to have the best possible opportunities. This proposal ensures that Milwaukee Public Schools retains its seat at the table and is an active partner in engaging communities to support our public schools and helping our kids get the educational experience they deserve."

I had good intentions, but misjudged the intentions at play in the new policy. Three months after the work requirement took effect, 15,000 Wisconsin residents became FoodShare ineligible, and only about 4,500 found employment as FSET participants. State representative Mark Born said that the new policies were working as intended, stating,

"The FSET program was created to help guide able-bodied adults back into the workforce, or put them on the path to gainful employment while remaining on FoodShare."

If the new policy was working as intended, the numbers suggest that the intention was not to get people working, but rather to justify terminating FoodShare.

My heart broke when I saw the reported numbers. These people who were going to be having trouble feeding themselves and their families.

My heart broke again when I saw how my coworkers responded to the same news. The name "ResCare" is supposed to mean "respect" and "care," yet those meant to be carrying out that mission only expressed judgment and resentment for those who lost FoodShare.

Other than myself, very few at the firm seemed to see the outcomes as a failure of ResCare or the state, or even to question how they happened. The accepted view was, and is, that those cut off are undeserving of public assistance. End of story.

There was, and is, little discussion among ResCare staff about the state's and ResCare's lack of effort to communicate the policy changes to FoodShare recipients. Most people at risk of losing FoodShare only received a couple of letters with confusing wording and a phone call from ResCare's scheduling department.

Announcements through mass media channels, clear explanations by Income Maintenance workers, and mailings that made the situation unambiguous did not happen.

There was, and is, little discussion among ResCare staff acknowledging that many people are unable to participate in FSET because they don't have access to transportation to attend an orientation and get enrolled.

Certainly this is a challenge even in areas with bus service. But in suburban and rural areas that don't have public transit, not owning a car probably means someone will become FoodShare ineligible.

There was, and is, little discussion among ResCare staff of the fact that for people who already work more than 20 hours a week, are physically or mentally unable to work, or otherwise qualify for exemption from required FSET participation, changing their status to exempt is a low hurdle race that many don't have the stamina to finish.

There was, and is, little discussion among ResCare staff of racism, education, the prison industrial complex, and other conditions that push the disadvantaged into poverty. The myth of the undeserving poor is driven deep into the views of the ResCare workers who, superficially, are meant to be helping FoodShare recipients "reach their highest level of independence."

Like ResCare employees, the general Wisconsin public has been largely uncritical of FSET and the FoodShare work requirement.

But my experience has led me to believe that this is because the general public is not widely aware of or does not understand the policy changes.

Policymakers have failed to address the lack of secure, family-supporting jobs, the lack of educational opportunities, the criminal justice system that disproportionately affects those who lack privilege, the lack of access to transportation, and institutional racism. Indeed, they seem to fail to even acknowledge these matters as problematic, and Wisconsin citizens have been excluded from the dialogue.

In a socioeconomic situation like ours, attempting to address unemployment by shouting "TRY HARDER" at the poor can only lead to shame, discouragement, and large numbers of people losing what little means they have to feed themselves.

Obama Urges Howard Graduates to Continue Needed Change

President Barack Obama told the graduates of one of the nation's leading historically black universities that America is "a better place today" than it was when he graduated from college, but more work needs to be done and urged them to be involved in the political process if they want to see change.

"When you don't vote, you give away your power," Obama said told the more than 2,300 graduates of Howard University. "Change is the effort of committed citizens ... Change requires more than speaking out; it requires listening to those with whom you disagree, and being prepared to compromise."

Carson as Trump's running mate?

we put a Muslim in charge of this nation. I absolutely would not agree with that."

On ABC's "This Week," he said: "When you have something that is against the rights of women, against the rights of gays, subjugates other religions, and a host of things that are not compatible with our Constitution, why, in fact, would you take that chance?"

In early October, Carson caused more controversy saying some of the nine victims of the Oregon community college massacre might have survived by rushing the shooter, and that he'd have stood up to the gunman. He later said: "I will not be politically correct."

Strongly critical of the news media's interpretation of his sentiments, Carson later said this to the National Press Club: "You're down there with used car salesmen..."

So Carson can be tough, and Trump has to know he may really need him to have any chance of attracting Black voters.

But would Carson accept the second spot? Stay tuned.

2016 Senior Signing Day! Friday, May 27

Witness a Historic 5-Peat at 2016 Senior Signing Day!

"Three-peat" is a well-known term honoring three consecutive championships in a sport. The Merriam-Webster Dictionary defines "three-peat" and even "four-peat." It has yet to define five-peat, likely because it is a rare occurrence in sports. The scholars at HOPE Christian High School have achieved a five-peat with lasting impact: For the fifth consecutive year, 100 percent of HOPE's graduating seniors have been accepted to college.

The seniors will be signing their letters of intent to the college of their choice on Friday, May 27, in the HOPE Christian High School gymnasium, located at 3215 N. Martin Luther King, Jr. Drive. The signing is scheduled to take place at 2 p.m.

To date, the 38 seniors scheduled to graduate in June 2016 have received 102 college acceptance letters. That number is expected to increase as graduation approaches, along with the scholarship and financial aid dollars awarded to these students.

HOPE Christian High School is a part of the HOPE Christian Schools network, serving nearly 2,000 students (K-12) throughout the Greater Milwaukee area. HOPE's mission is exemplified by the 3 Cs—Christ. College. Character.® We're committed to providing all of our scholars with a rigorous faith-based education that prepares them to get 'to and through college' and to lead with strong character.
