Legislators praise agreement between Bucks and Alliance for Good Jobs for new arena employees

Team commits to job quality and access initiatives for future jobs in the new arena and surrounding development

Compiled by MCJ Staff

State Sen. Lena Taylor and State Rep. La Tonya Johnson applauded Tuesday an agreement between the Milwaukee Bucks and the Alliance for Good Jobs. The deal was announced during an afternoon press conference.

"When we negotiated the Bucks deal, the team promised they would take care of their workers and be a change agent in Milwaukee," said Taylor, who helped negotiate the state financing for the arena.

"Today was a big step towards making good on that pledge. I hope this deal sets the bar for other companies to be good corporate citizens as well."

Saying what was only a promise at the time is now a reality with the announcement of the agreement, Rep. Johnson commended local labor officials and the Bucks ownership on working together to strike a deal.

"I hope that others take notice that when labor and management come to the table and work in good faith, the wider community can enjoy the benefits of economic development."

As part of this comprehensive plan, the Bucks are committing to living wage and first source hiring provisions that will create opportunities for Milwaukee residents in disadvantaged communities. The agreement covers direct employees of the Bucks as well as employees of contractors engaged by the Bucks in the arena district.

The agreement establishes a living wage floor for all covered employees in the new arena and surrounding district. The agreement stipulates a minimum wage for end use employees of $15 per hour by 2023, starting at $12 per hour in 2017.

"Our ownership group has never wavered in its commitment to not only build a world-class arena, but to create jobs and drive economic growth in a truly meaningful way for the Milwaukee community," Bucks President Peter Feigin said. "Through this agreement we're fulfilling our commitment to generate high-quality and long-lasting jobs for the citizens of Milwaukee who need them most. This program is absolutely vital to the long-term success of the project."

Additionally, the Bucks and Alliance for Good Jobs will enact a first source hiring program that will require at least 50 percent of covered employees in the arena district to reside (at the time of hire) in specified Milwaukee zip codes that are particularly hard hit by unemployment or underemployment. The Alliance will establish a "hiring hall" to serve as a first source for potential employees, including recruiting, screening, training and referring potential

Question and Photos by Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"How important is it for our children to know and experience their history?"

"Civil rights and the history of our Black people is instrumental in this generation having an equal and progressive future. If you don't know your past, how can you reach for the future."

Jorian Lavender
(Parent)

"I feel that it is of most importance for our children to know their Black history so they not only know where they've come from, but where we are headed as a race. They can build and motivate themselves based upon learning our history. What experiences we've had shape our future and as a parent, for me, this means volumes. Every life matters, but right now we need to emphasize how Black lives do matter too!"

Nikida Edwards
(Parent)

"It is important to experience geographically, places and things that are outside of the norm which could be their neighborhood, zip code, community and or state...understanding the path that got us to today is vital to our future."

Tyrone P. Dumas
(Chapterone)

"It is very important for our children to see their history up close and personal. It gives them a real opportunity to see the historical imprint that our ancestors have left for us. Not only that, to experience it first hand presents a very lasting impression that is better than any book and/or classroom experience."

candidates to arena district employers.

The new agreement also includes a provision that will provide arena district employees with an opportunity to unionize in an environment that is neutral and free from traditional pressures associated with a contested and adversarial campaign and without labor unrest and work disruption.

"This comprehensive landmark agreement establishes a community standard in Milwaukee for good, family-supporting jobs, and ensures that they are filled by our people who need them the most," Alliance for Good Jobs representative Peter Rickman said.

"This agreement demonstrates how labor, community organizations and business can work collaboratively to address Milwaukee's good jobs crisis. We are proud to help shape a transformative project and excited about the implications for Milwaukee's economy, workers and neighborhoods."

Said Taylor: "This deal has been a long time coming. It wasn't easy taking it from what Republicans originally proposed to what ultimately became law. The Walker economy has been tough on Milwaukee."

"But today's agreement by a Wisconsin business based in Milwaukee is a tremendous commitment to their workers, our economy and our community," said Taylor. "I've been a Bucks fan since I was a little girl and I can honestly say this is one of the biggest off-court moments for the team in my lifetime."

The new arena will be the centerpiece of an ambitious development project envisioned by Bucks owners to transform 27-acres of mostly vacant property into a vibrant retail and entertainment district in the heart of downtown Milwaukee.

The surrounding development is expected to include an additional $500 million worth of private investment. The Bucks have already begun to invest in a new $30 million training facility adjacent to the new arena.

Scheduled to open in fall of 2018, the 714,000 square foot arena will be home to Milwaukee Bucks basketball and countless sports and entertainment events.

The arena design features an intimate bowl optimized for basketball viewing with the majority of the seats in the lower level closer to the action, while still providing the flexibility to host hockey games, end stage and center stage concerts, family shows, circuses and ice events, as well as open-floor exhibitions.

Designed by Populous, Eppstein Uhen and HNTB, the arena caters to the next generation of fans, featuring open and transparent concourses, additional social spaces within view of the action, and a variety of experiential and premium seating options.

The team submitted detailed design plans to the city in March and is planning a groundbreaking celebration for June 18. Precious Lives radio series to go live June 15 at the Pabst Theater

Milwaukee Public Radio and 371 Productions are pleased to announce the first live performance of Precious Lives on June 15 at the Pabst Theater.

This original storytelling experience adds new dimension to the stories heard each week on Precious Lives, the 100-part, two-year radio/print series and community engagement project that explores young people and gun violence in Milwaukee.

"The goal is to continue the amazing work in Precious Lives with a live performance that allows the storytellers and audience to connect and examine the gun violence in our community," Precious Lives: Live Director Michelle Lopez-Rios says.

Eric Von, lead producer of Precious Lives: Before the Gunshots, will guide the audience through stories of those directly impacted by gun violence.

Live music and video mixing by Kiran Vee of New Age Narcissism, video and visual art by True Skool and a mix of with new and familiar voices will make the evening a multi-media experience to be remembered.

"We are doing this to find a way to bring a discussion about gun violence in our community to new audiences, and to highlight the stories of both those impacted by gun violence and all the people in our community trying to stop it," Executive Producer of Precious Lives Brad Lichtenstein says.

The show begins at 6 pm, doors open at 5 pm. Tickets are available for $10 and include admittance to a reception after the show.

Free tickets and ticket scholarships are also available for community organizations. Contact Paul Kjelland at paul@371productions.com for more information.

"There are places in Milwaukee where [gun violence] doesn't directly affect people and that's one of the biggest problems.

"You can't turn a blind eye, just because you don't live in a neighborhood where you hear gunshots every day," said Isaac Hoeschen, Precious Lives Episode 62.

Precious Lives: Live is brought to you by WUWM in collaboration with 371 Productions, as part of Finding America, a national initiative produced by AIR, with financial support from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Precious Lives was developed by 371 Productions in partnership with Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, WUWM, WNOV and the Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism.

PERSPECTIVES

If you REALLY want to reduce crime, you REALLY gotta wanna’ SIGNIFYIN’

“Would you turn your son in to police if you knew he was carrying a gun or selling drugs?” I asked my female friend, knowing her answer even as the words escaped my mouth.

My friend and I were having one of our usual “save the world debates” when the subject turned to crime—specifically gun violence.

We both questioned whether a series of prayer vigils and marches had any effect when I offered that I knew how to reduce gun violence, but it would be an unpopular remedy.

It was at that point I posed my hypothetical question.

Almost before her brows went upward and she uttered the word no (actually, it was heeeeeelllllll no), I blurted out: “Then don’t get mad when you hear about another child being murdered.”

Seems like everybody wants to end the violence, but few of us are willing to do what’s necessary to make an individual contribution.

Nothing is free in this world, I learned, particularly freedom. And that includes freedom from terrorism or fear of it.

Of course, I was being facetious and a tad bit disingenuous in my attack of the sister. I really didn’t mean to pick on the sister, to make it appear that she was an accessory to the terrorism gripping our community.

But my assertion was on point.

For whatever reason, God is not responding to our prayers to end the madness that has consumed our community.

Last Saturday, well over 100 civic-minded members of King Solomon Missionary Baptist Church were joined by area residents in the church’s second annual “Stop the Violence Prayer Walk.”

Their demonstration was part of a national campaign that was held in 51 cities.

When the marchers left the church last year at this time, Milwaukee had been humbled by 58 murders, most within a few miles of that house of God.

As of Saturday, there have been 37 homicides, mostly of Black people, including nine-year-old Za’layia Jenkins, who was watching television when a hail of bullets ended her life.

For the record, I believe in prayer, even if I questioned the biblical capstone when I entered the hospital on October 1, 2014.

Within a couple of days, the physicians suggested to my wife that she pull the plug because the infection that had ravished my body, shutting down several organs, was continuing to spread unabated and would probably leave me brain dead.

The physicians said there was nothing they could do and it was “in

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

God’s hands,” I was later told.

That’s all my family needed to know. They started a prayer vigil that went national. And guess what (that’s a dumb question, I assume)?

God responded to the prayers of relatives and literally hundreds of friends and well-wishers, and as a result I am a testament that when “two or more call upon His name....” (That’s scripture to the ill informed.)

Prayer does work. But, apparently, not all the time, and more often, not when your request is initially made.

Maybe it’s because the Bible also mentions that faith (prayer) without works gains little; that God hasn’t responded to the call for peace in the streets. In other words, and as some ministers will tell you, you must pray for direction and then get off your butt and do what the Holy Spirit directs you to do.

Which takes me back to my comment to my female friend.

Better yet, let me take you to Sunday morning, right after I read Brother James Causey’s column in the Journal Sentinel. James wrote about a new strategy to fight crime. He’s right. And here are three suggestions that might speed that conversation along.

For the record, none of James’ strategies come without pain or discomfort. And one is unrealistic and wishful thinking. You be the judge:

--Turn the bastards in! (Pun intended, albeit politically incorrect.)

There was a kid who used to live across the street from the Community Journal who I would occasionally pay to do odd jobs in and around the newspaper offices.

Sometimes he would come to the paper to ask for work so he could buy food for his siblings.

On more than a few occasions, his “Neckbone” mother would send him to seek out work so “she” could purchase a pack of cancer sticks. (Obviously, I drew the line at that enabler.)

In any event, one day a neighbor reported the young—fatherless—boy had broken into my truck, and stolen some items.

I ran outside, saw him dashing across the street and gave chase. I caught him at a neighborhood tavern.

Customers at the bar pointed in unison to the bathroom where the boy was hiding in a stall.

I was mad. Not just because he stole, but that he stole from me(!), someone who had helped, and tried to mentor him.

I grabbed him by his collar, was about to hit him with a couple of Kempo punches, when a policeman stuck his head in the door, saw what I was about to do, and walked out.

It hit me like a Muhammad Ali left jab that the cop (a nice fellow I’ve seen around the neighborhood) was giving me permission to beat this kid up.

And that thought brought me back to reality.

The police took the kid home. I followed. His mother pleaded for his release, saying how much of a good boy he was. The cops asked if I wanted to press charges. After a couple of seconds, I relented.

I don’t know to this day if my reaction was because I didn’t want the kid to be part of the system, a hole he would never be able to climb out of.

Or, if I thought I could return him to the path of righteousness. But in

The Myth of Cultural Diversity as a Cure for Racial Disparity

By Roy Bradford Evans, Attorney at Law

Myth*: A fiction or half truth that shapes a person’s world view.

Culture*: Socially transmitted behavior, belief and institutional patterns of a particular class, population, community or group.

Diversity*: Made up of distinct characteristics differing from another.

In my opinion cultural diversity, having been put forth as an attempt to achieve racial equality, is a tragic myth that has shown itself to be merely the ethnic cleansing of Affirmative Action.

Affirmative Action was created as a legal tool and attempt to address, balance and equalize racial bias and discrimination by reversing the historic attitudes, systems, practices and policies that created unfair racial disparities in our society which were based on race. (I.e. white superiority, white privilege, etc.) Instead of fighting to promote and protect the concept of Affirmative Action as a mechanism for achieving fairness and equality we retreated in the face of opposition to it by bowing down to the misguided notion that we must seek to achieve equality instead of demanding that we be treated fairly.

Nothing is equal but fairness can be achieved with all things considered. (I often found it ironic, although I fully understood the reasoning behind it, that I was always encouraged to work twice as hard in order to be equal to someone who, for the most part, I often did not consider equal to me.)

When the concept of Affirmative Action was introduced as a remedy for racial bias and disparity, the first attacks were loud and swift with cries of “reverse discrimination” and “unfair racial preference.”

To me it was like saying “how dare you treat us like we have treated you.” In reality, “reverse discrimination” is an oxymoron because there surely must be an admission of discrimination in the first instance in order to validate a claim of reverse discrimination.

I am prompted to ask, “Who have black people ever discriminated against”? Reverse discrimination is a manufactured term merely used as a subterfuge to thwart any attempt to recalibrate the historic unfairness and continued racial bias that was created by racial discrimination which may, by chance, reverse, threaten or undermine the white privilege that created the discrimination in the first place.

How do you discriminate against “legacy admissions” and white privilege? How can you possibly balance the injustices of historic racial unfairness unless you reverse it?

The only plausible way to reverse racial bias and unfairness is to use a race based remedy, not cultural diversity.

As I have stated the concept of cultural diversity is merely the ethnic cleansing of Affirmative Action and an undermining remedy directed at any attempt to erode the foundation of racial bias and discrimination.

White females, with all due respect to their recognized courageous historic struggles and righteous attempts to gain equality, have benefited most from the concept of cultural diversity which is factual and based on current empirical research and data. The statistics and data bear witness to the impact of the phenomenon of cultural diversity as a misguided remedy for racial bias.

As a second year law student I had the privilege of being selected to serve on the National Panel on Post Bakke Strategies representing the nation’s minority law students.

This panel was chaired by Arthur Schlesinger and was held at the United Nations in New York. (UC Regents vs. Bakke (1978) was a case decided by the Supreme Court that was brought by a white medical school applicant who claimed that he was harmed by the use of race in the medical school admissions process thus creating the concept of Affirmative Action).

Beside the honor of being a part of this historically significant event and dialoging with distinguished scholars and individuals promoting the concept and ideal of affirmative action, I could not help but wonder how long this Supreme Court victory, in attempting to correct the wrongs of America’s past, would last. It did not last long at all.

Before I could even return to classes the attacks and backtracking had begun.

Now, 37 years since graduating from law school I have found that disparity and racial bias continues to flourish while fairness and racial equality continues to erode to the detriment of black culture and black progress.

I continue to wonder if black lives will ever really matter when it comes to justice, fairness and the right to equal opportunity in America?

Racism is a vexing and difficult conversation to have mainly because as soon as you mention racism the first thing you hear is the preverbal denial of personal guilt responses like, “I’m not racist” or “you’re just playing the race card”.

Not being able to enter into intellectual discourse about such a complex subject is difficult enough but to have to deal with the emotional trauma of denial and self preservation right from the start makes it a virtually impossible proposition.

Racism is a system and should not be viewed as a personal belief. Notwithstanding, my response to the retort that “I’m not a racist,” is, “If you benefit from a system of racism how then can you claim that you are not a racist?” Racism is a broader legal issue.

Being a racist is a personal moral issue. Confusing the two makes racism almost impossible to talk about to any degree of understanding. When there is a lack of understanding no problematic situation can ever be properly examined or resolved.

If we cannot talk about racism can we at least talk about “white privilege”? In Milwaukee white privilege (racism) is the alpha and omega behind every racial disparity that exists in the city in which I was born, grew up in and currently practice law.

Notwithstanding the “pull yourself up by your bootstrap” and “personal responsibility” arguments, racism drives the policies and systems that created and maintains the racial disparity and inequality that makes Milwaukee a dubious national leader in that regard.

The argument is always “it’s not legal to use race to make things right” or” whites will sue for reverse discrimination.” This is pure nonsense and is a typical pretext used to do nothing to fight racial disparity. In the case (Gunter vs. Bollinger (2003)) it was held that racial preference could be used as a factor in balancing past racial discrimination and disparity.

This means that when racial disparity is so out of whack, like it is in Milwaukee, race can be used as a preference until you achieve a modicum of racial balance.

Then, once the disparity has been reduced to a reasonably acceptable level, race can no longer be used as a prime consideration. How can you balance a racial disparity without the consideration of race?

How do you reverse racial discrimination without using race to some degree? Cultural diversity has proven to not be the answer to this question or a proven remedy for this continuing conundrum.

We have seen many attempts to answer inequity with DBE, EBE, HUB, MBE, SBE, WBE, CD, etc. None of which has worked because every attempt at leveling the playing field is attacked, undermined and watered down in a deliberate attempt to maintain the status quo thereby delegitimizing the mechanisms put in place to create fairness and equal opportunity.

For Affirmative Action it was initially called reverse discrimination. Now it’s “cultural diversity”

It never ceases to amaze me that through our constant attempts and consistent failures to achieve basic fairness in our free society there is a need to continually make every effort to note that for some reason African Americans should continue to carry the burdens of America’s racial history and in doing so somehow owe reparations to whites for the implicit economic benefits that they have derived and inherited from the forced enslavement of our ancestors. (I call it the “trickledown economic theory of racial inheritance.”) Fairness of reparation is not and should not be color blind.

My grandmother would simply call it “the pot that constantly calls the kettle black.”

Even my grandmother would recognize that cultural diversity is merely the pot that continues to call the kettle black. Cultural diversity is neither the cure for racial discrimination nor a remedy for racial disparity.

RELIGION

The Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ

Sunday May 29 is the Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ. The readings are: Genesis 14: 18-20, First Corinthians 11: 23-26 and Luke 9: 11b-17.

We find an early reference to the importance of bread and wine in Genesis, when Melchizadek, the king of Salem, brought forth bread and wine and gave a blessing to Abram. And Abram's response was to give a tenth of everything to God most high.

Paul, in Corinthians, hundreds of years later, gives us the very words that we use each week as we bring forth bread and wine.

Paul says: "The Lord Jesus, on the night he was handed over, took bread, and, after he had given thanks, broke it and said, 'this is my body that is for you, do this in remembrance of me.'

In the same way also the cup, after supper, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in my blood. Do this, as often as you drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim the death of the Lord until he comes."

This is one of the greatest gifts Jesus gave to his church, on the night before he was killed. He could have spent the remaining hours with his disciples saying many different things, but he chose to give us himself in the form of bread and wine, for all time.

Christ is present in his church in many different ways; we became "Christed" at our baptism, we see Christ in others, and we see Christ especially in the poor and oppressed.

And we see him in the form of bread and wine; simple elements that are set apart and treated like Paul says Jesus did on the night before he died.

At every celebration of the Holy Eucharist, we renew the actions Jesus gave us and the reality is that in the humble bread and wine the Presence of the Living Jesus comes to us in a powerful way that ought to change us and bring us into conformity with him.

And this conformity is not a physical resemblance to Jesus but a spiritual one. We, like Jesus, will be empowered to act like he acted and love like he loved. We will become what we eat, as St. Augustine said.

Fed at the banquet of the Lord, we will gain strength to live lives of service and support for others, especially the hungry and hounded, the lost and forsaken.

The Gospel for the Feast is the story of the feeding of the 5000 men, not counting women and children. From five loaves and two fish he satisfied the hunger of thousands. This is not a spiritual story only. These folks were physically hungry, not just spiritually. And he fed them without asking any questions about their worthiness.

So, for us to receive the Holy Eucharist is to empower

BREAD IN THE WILDERNESS

By Fr. Carl Diederichs, St. Lucy/ St. Luke Catholic Churches Houlma-Thibodaux, LA us to seek out the hungry and the hounded, the weak and the ignored, the folks who have no place at the table in our society.

If we become what we eat, and we eat the Body and drink the Blood of Christ until he comes, then we will be willing to dedicate our lives to others and know that we will always have enough. We will even have left overs.

"Christ is present in his church in many different ways; we became 'Christed' at our baptism, we see Christ in others, and we see Christ especially in the poor and oppressed. And we see him in the form of bread and wine; simple elements that are set apart and treated like Paul says Jesus did on the night before he died."

34TH ANNUAL MLK SCHOLARSHIP ALL-A-THON MAY 28

The 34th annual Martin Luther King Scholarship All-A-Thon will be held on Saturday, May 28, taking off at 8:30 AM from Matters of the Heart Christian Ministries (Inside of "For Him International" building), 2544 N. 27th St., Rev. Teresa Thomas-Boyd, pastor. Registration will take place starting at 8:00 AM. Special 2016 T-shirts will be available at registration for $10.00.

The MLK Scholarship Coalition, comprised currently of 10 congregations, has sponsored the MLK Scholarship All-A-Thon annually since 1982. Membership in the MLK Scholarship Coalition is open to any congregation/organization committed to fostering post-high school education, upon payment of the $500 membership fee.

MLK Scholarships are awarded annually at the MLK celebration, held on the Sunday before Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday, January 15.

A total of 12 college students and high school seniors committed to enrolling full-time in post high school courses of study by the fall of 2016, were recipients of congregations/organizations, are eligible to apply for an MLK Scholarship.

Anyone supportive of post high school education is welcome to participate in the May 28 MLK Scholarship All-A-Thon and/or to contribute to the fund that provides the scholarships that are awarded annually. The amount of the individual scholarships varies from $750 to $1,500, depending on the quality of the applicant's essay, the extent of the applicant's participation in service activities, including participation in the MLK All-A-Thon, and the applicant's stated life goals.

"The annual MLK Scholarship All-A-Thon, with a wide diversity of participants, is a powerful celebration of the value of education and the potential of youth," states Tuwania Anderson, Co-Chair of the MLK Scholarship Coalition Board. "It also is a strong sign of community togetherness," she adds.

The MLK Scholarship program was inaugurated in 1976, resulting from an initiative of three clergy serving in Milwaukee at the time: The late Rev. Ernest Glenn, Christ Presbyterian Church; Rev. James Lyles, Metropolitan United Methodist minister; Rev. Joseph Ellwanger, Cross Lutheran Church. The scholarship program, requiring each applicant to write an essay on some aspect of Dr. King's writings or activities, was envisioned as a way of keeping Dr. King's legacy alive in the hearts and minds of succeeding generations.

YOUTH & EDUCATION

Milwaukee Youth Council encourages participation in MATC's YouthBuild

The City of Milwaukee Youth Council is encouraging local young people to participate in Milwaukee Area Technical College's YouthBuild initiative. YouthBuild is a free program that trains young people in construction work while they earn their GED, empowering the participants to lead successful careers in the trades.

The next session of YouthBuild will begin in June, and those who are interested in participating must complete an academic assessment before Wednesday, June 8, 2016 to qualify.

Kalan R. Haywood, II, president of the Youth Council, said the free YouthBuild opportunity is an offer that's too good to pass up. "MATC's YouthBuild initiative is a great opportunity for youth to earn their GED and gain valuable work experience in construction," he said.

This program is open to anyone between the ages of 16 and 24, who; has not earned a high school diploma; and who has been convicted of a crime, has a documented disability, has been in foster care, has low income, has parents who are migrant farm workers, or has a parent in jail.

Interested youth should contact Kevin Turner at (414) 647-0548 or kturner@journeyhouse.org or Derick Cornelius at (414) 297-6796 or cornelid@matc.edu before June 8.

Live show adapts poignant "PRECIOUS LIVES" gun violence series

A child is wounded by random gunfire. A teen dies after an argument escalates into violence.

Police investigate. Memorials of teddy bears and ribbons are built. Families and neighborhoods are devastated. Then it happens again – more than 100 times a year in Milwaukee the past two years.

"Precious Lives" is a 100-part radio and podcast series about kids, guns and violence. Created by 371 Productions – in collaboration with the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, WUWM-FM 89.7 Milwaukee Public Radio, WNOV-AM 860 and the Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism – the stories explore the impact of, and solutions to, the violence.

Now, with the help of Michelle Lopez-Rios, head of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's acting program, some of those stories are being made into a theatrical production.

"Precious Lives: The Live Show" is set for 6 p.m.

Wednesday, June 15, at Milwaukee's Pabst Theater, 144 E. Wells St. Eric Von, lead producer of "Precious Lives: Before the Gunshots," will guide the audience through stories of those directly impacted by gun violence. The show also features live music and video mixing by Kiran Vee of New Age Narcissism, video and visual art by True Skool, and a mix of new and familiar voices.

"We all need to embrace that this is our city, our community," Lopez-Rios said, "and talk about how can we work together to make it better."

Lopez-Rios, an associate professor of voice and speech, has extensive experience in restorative theatre – guiding and empowering people in telling their own stories. Already a follower of the series, she jumped at the chance to join the conversation.

"Even those who are familiar with the series will have an opportunity to experience it in a whole other way," Lopez-Rios said, "because seeing a live performance – a person right in front of you – tell their story is different than listening to it on the radio."

Paul Kjelland, engagement director for 371 Productions, says the presentation incorporates tapes from the radio production, and some of the people interviewed will tell their own stories. Over the past two years, the series has told the stories of victims and their families, and talked to doctors, police officers, paramedics and other first responders.

The live production will feature a collage of stories, including new ones that Lopez-Rios discovered in a series of four workshops with youth at the COA Holton Center.

"It's important to me that those who have experienced this, especially the youth, have an understanding of how important their story is to share," Lopez-Rios said. "The community needs to hear this. We can instigate change."

The youth who will take the stage draw on personal experiences to share how violence has impacted them and their families, sometimes illustrating it through music or spoken-word poetry.

"Some of these kid live this every day," Lopez-Rios said. "They're 13 years old and they don't know if they're going to live to be 14 years old because once a week, they drop to the floor in their own house because they hear gunshots. To live like that cannot be OK."

Two UWM students are also involved with the production. Tevin Smith, who graduated in May with a bachelor's degree in communications and a minor in journalism, advertising and mass communications, interned at 371 Productions. Kimberly Gartrell is a theater student assisting Lopez-Rios.

"Precious Lives: The Live Show" is part of Finding America, a national initiative produced by AIR, with financial support from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Tickets are on sale at pabsttheater.org, by phone at 414-286-3663 and at the Pabst Theater's Box Office. The performance will be followed by a discussion with audience and community members. Additional related events will take place through the summer.

National Minority Supplier Development Council Honors Leaders in Supply Chain Diversity

Shaleta Dunn, Director of Diverse Talent & Supplier Programs for Milwaukee's ManpowerGroup,

Among Honorees at Black-Tie Gala Event at New York Hilton's Grand Ballroom

On Wednesday, May 18th, the 2016 National Minority Supplier Development Council Leadership Awards recognized the dynamic corporate executives, minority business owners and NMSDC affiliate council presidents for outstanding leadership that has a positive impact on their companies and resonates throughout the NMSDC network.

David Ushery, co-anchor of NBC 4 New York's weekday 5:30 newscast, was Master of Ceremonies. The black-tie gala event, attended by 1,400 at the New York Hilton, included dinner and a ceremony to present the honorees.

According to President Joset Wright-Lacy of NMSDC (www.nmsdc.org), "Leadership is not easy to define, but it is an essential element in achieving success and inspiring others to maximize their potential. A leader establishes a vision, sets direction and provides the guidance needed to reach a goal. Leadership is about passion in pursuit of that vision, in service of others, not oneself."

This year, the Corporate Catalyst Award honoree was Ms. Shaleta Dunn, who is responsible for Supplier Diversity and Diverse Talent Initiatives at ManpowerGroup of Milwaukee, WI. ManpowerGroup believes in the power of connecting people with jobs and purpose.

They rely on their diverse suppliers who have the knowledge, capacity, and capability to help find the best talent to meet clients' needs.

The award honors a corporate member with five to ten years' experience in a corporate supplier diversity role. The recipient demonstrates exceptional leadership while engaging internal and external peers in support of NMSDC's mission. "I aspire to inspire others the way they inspire me. I aspire to raise other leaders..." says Ms. Dunn.

NMSDC advances business opportunities for certified minority business enterprises and connects them to corporate members.

To meet the growing need for supplier diversity, NMSDC matches more than 12,000 certified minority-owned businesses to a network of more than 1,750 corporate members who wish to purchase their products, services and solutions.

NMSDC is proud of its unwavering commitment to advance Asian, Black, Hispanic and Native American suppliers in a globalized corporate supply chain.

The Corporate Co-Chair for the 2016 Leadership Awards was Toyota, the MBE Co-Chair was GEP, and the Corporate Plus Co-Chair was World Wide Technology. MetLife was the VIP reception sponsor. Black Enterprise was the media partner for the event.

Youth basketball league to promote entrepreneurship through athletics

A new basketball league that promote's entrepreneurship to central city youth through sports is looking for participants, businesses, coaches, referees to take the league from drawing board to reality.

The Cream Skills Basketball Association, or CSBA is a professional style basketball league complete with coaches, owners, a draft, all-star game, playoffs and championship. The league will be upon to players 14 to 17 years of age.

The 2016 initial season will be a three-on-three half court tournament with up to six players on each team. The 2017 season will be a five-on-five full court league with up to 10 players on each team.

Each team will have an owner and coach. The team owners and coaches will be comprised of community business owners/staff/representatives.

During what is being called "Championship Week," the league will offer an all-star game, owners and coaches game, and three-point shoot-out.

Owners can recruit players from all across the city. Every season (not including the 2016 season) begins with a lottery which determines the draft pick order.

After the initial 2016 season, players who are signed to a franchise automatically qualify to receive free mentoring via the Cream Skills mentoring program "training camp" (an academic enrichment/basketball 101/life skills/young entrepreneurship club).

During the 2016 season players receive financial literacy and life skills programming.

The CSBA's also aims to encourage good sportsmanship, developing strong playing skills, and promoting friendly relationships among the players, coaches, referees and parents.

According to the league's principal organizer Nigel Harvey, The league has already retained the commitment of 10 local businesses, among them Gee's Clippers, Pursenality, Cream City Phresh and Operation Dream.

The league has also formed partnerships and garnered support from "Make a Difference Wisconsin," MATC, Seventh District Ald. Khalif Rainey and state Rep. David Bowen.

Children's Outing Association (COA) has agreed to host the CSBA's first season, and MATC has agreed to allow Cream Skills Inc. to use a classroom this summer for program facilitation.

For more information about the league and how you can become a part of its mission, contact Harvey at 414-391-0969, or email him at creamskills@gmail.com

Just because it does not fit the norm, does not mean it is wrong.

Do you sit around listening to every piece of gossip and judge its worth?

I have a news flash, the scoop, the low down, the extra, extra read all about it is simply this:

City of Milwaukee Health Department Confirms Multiple Cases of Mumps

Health officials remind public on importance of vaccination, urge awareness of symptoms

The City of Milwaukee Health Department (MHD) has received reports of three confirmed cases of mumps infection in city residents, including area college students and community members.

Mumps is a contagious respiratory illness caused by the mumps virus. It is spread through the air by droplets and contact with saliva or mucus from infected persons.

Mumps can be transmitted through coughing and sneezing as well as sharing food or beverage items and utensils with infected individuals. Symptoms of mumps include fever, body aches, headaches, and swelling or pain of the salivary glands near the ears and jaw.

Anyone who experiences these symptoms should contact his/her health care provider for diagnosis and testing.

The MHD recommends that persons experiencing symptoms consistent with mumps infection, especially swelling of one or both salivary glands, call your health-care provider and stay home from work or school for a minimum of five days after the onset of swelling.

Individuals are also advised to cover their mouths and noses when coughing or sneezing and wash hands frequently with soap and water.

While most individuals recover fully, mumps infection can occasionally cause serious complications in adults that can include inflammation of the testicles in men or ovaries and breasts in women, inflammation of the brain (encephalitis), and temporary or permanent deafness.

Vaccination with two doses of Mumps-Measles-Rubella (MMR) vaccine is the best way to prevent mumps infection.

Public health officials advise individuals to be aware of their vaccination status, and seek advice from a health care provider if your vaccinations are not up to date.

For more information, visit www.milwaukee.gov/health or www.cdc.gov/mumps.
