PULSE OF THE COMMUNITY

Question and Photos by Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"We asked Summerfest goers what act or event stood out the most during this year's festival?"

"Everything was as and crowded as ever, but there was a subdued tension under the surface."

(Editor's note: Ms. Puritoy may have been at Summerfest the night of the shooting of five police officers in Dallas, which would explain the atmosphere)

"One thing that stood out to me was during the 'Kirk Franklin Worship Hour.' Many were refreshed to know that God is greater than any situation."

"This was my first Summerfest. On the night I went, I noticed there wasn't a lot of African Americans there. It wasn't a lot of African American performers. I went to the Nelly Concert."

"I was able to get to Summerfest by boat! No traffic on the lake. This was a great way to see Summerfest from a different side. Common put on a great show. I'm looking forward to next year, the 50th year."

Lack of permit halts planned street march

Milwaukee Police prohibit anti-police brutality march from taking to the streets, marchers restricted to sidewalk

By Thomas E. Mitchell, Jr.

It was like night and day between Monday and Tuesday protests in Red Arrow Park in response to the recent deaths of two Black men at the hands of white police officers in Louisiana and Minnesota.

As the photos above show, demonstrators, led by the Coalition for Justice, started by the family and supporters of Dontre Hamilton--who two years ago was fatally shot by a Milwaukee police officer in the same park--showed up in mass on Monday to protest the officer involved shooting deaths of Alton Sterling in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and Philando Castile in a suburb of St. Paul Minnesota.

Milwaukee police officers, as has been their custom during demonstrations of police brutality by the Coalition the last two years, stood on the periphery--in a show of force--to make sure the rallies and demonstrations stayed peaceful.

Protestors filled the small downtown park that rests between two city landmarks: City Hall and the Marcus Center for the Performing Arts.

Both Monday and Tuesday protests here held at around 5 p.m., the time public and private sector workers end their workday and head home.

On Tuesday, things were dramatically different in the park and in the actions of the police.

Demonstrators returned to the park Tuesday to see that there were beer-garden trucks from Sprecher Brewing occupying the park space, as well as picnic tables that were set-up in front of the Red Arrow monument and under shade trees near by. The photo from Monday shows no beer trucks or picnic tables, as protestors held their rally at the foot of the historic marker.

Instead of standing on the sidelines watching, Milwaukee police and com-

MCJ EDITORIAL

Strategies needed to empower our community, put the community and police on common ground, and end senseless street violence

The Milwaukee Community Journal is working daily to chronicle the African American experience in Milwaukee, and the metro area. The recent turn of events in Wauwatosa, in Atlanta, in Dallas and Orlando and places throughout the United States has humbled us because we understand the sympathy associated with loss yet again! We are weary and befuddled with apparent unwarranted overuse of power by yet another policeman.

At the same time, we know the importance of having our police officers respond to the many crimes that sometimes overwhelm our community: Shootings, auto thefts, domestic fights, gang wars, burglaries and assaults.

We need our police and we need them daily. How many of our neighbors belong to the MPD, the Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department, the State Highway Patrol, or are part of the National Guard? They are our family, brothers, sisters, cousins and Dads. Every cop is not a "bad cop."

Our newspaper's 2015 focus on "Men Empowering Men" honored several men who are first responders. These men (and the women they serve with) showed us individuals who not only protect us, but raise strong families and give of their talents to build other strong Black men.

So it was meaningful to hear President Obama say, in frustration, in grief, in disbelief what we all feel: "When will it stop." Violence is NOT THE ANSWER! An eye for an eye does not work.

PERSPECTIVES

Are Black Christians partly responsible for the mayhem and violence that defines our community?

Are Christians partly responsible for the racial acrimony and violence that defines, or has redefined America?

Are those of us ever-dwindling number of African Americans who profess to be followers of “The” Christ complicit in the assassinations of five police officers in Dallas? Should White Christians assume some of the blame for Dylann Roof’s assassination of nine Black parishioners in an AME church in Charlotte, South Carolina?

Provocative questions? For sure. But compelling? Answer that question at the end of this column (which will conclude next week...it’s long, but religious topics tend to make me a little long-winded).

And for the record I’m not talking about Christians taking partial “blame” as in the idiotic statements made by State Rep. Mandela Barnes when he thought he was scoring political points by saying the mass murders at an Orlando gay nightclub was inspired by the conservative theology of many—including Black—Christians.

That’s not what the author, Tony Evans, of an incendiary article in the Washington Post meant when he posed those questions.

Reverend Evans was instead trying to show a link between the social chaos we are witnessing today, and the reality that the church has strayed from its ordained mission.

Evans, pastor of Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship in Dallas and president of the Urban Alternative, wrote his controversial article literally in the shadow of the horrific assassinations of the Dallas police officers, who were murdered during a demonstration organized by Black Lives Matter.

Staged by a Black former Army specialist, the slayings (he also wounded seven officers and protestors) was sparked by the shooter’s anger over a series of questionable killings of Black men by police, most recently in Baton Rouge, LA and St. Paul, MN.

Undergirding both of those two extremes is a society on the brink of a racial meltdown reminiscent of the 1960s.

And fueling that flame is historic poverty levels in the Black community, a near total breakdown of the nuclear family structure and the related emergence of a sub-culture that old warriors for justice find dichotomous and confusing.

Thus, Evans denunciation was

SIGNIFYIN’

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

“The church must also move people from membership to discipleship, Evans said. Just being members of the church is not good enough anymore. “We need visible, verbal followers of Jesus the Christ who are public with their witness and trained how to do that. If the church doesn’t train people to do that, it has failed.”

aimed at not just Black victims of police prejudice and fear, but at the Dallas assassin and 805,000 other shooters who pulled their respective triggers in 2015 mostly in urban areas of the county.

That’s almost one million shootings that police responded to, and one million victims of violence. A disproportionate number of those shootings occurred in the Black community.

As was a disproportionate percentage of the 512 police killings of “suspects.” Almost weekly another police killing brings into question prejudice, profiling and perceptions that force Black men to fear for their lives when a red light flashes in their rear view mirror.

Black America is literally caught between shooters at both ends of the spectrum in part because the Christian Church has become a fraternity, Rev. Evans surmises. And that fraternity has been partying in the frat house while social despair, racism, and poverty has taken root outside its doors.

Too broad a brush? Pointing a finger in the wrong direction? An overly simplistic analysis?

Maybe. Or maybe not.

Obviously, those who are skeptical—or who totally reject the concept of God—whether called Allah, Elohim or Olodumare—won’t embrace anything that follows in this article. If that’s your profile, you may as well turn the page, stop reading and go back to your rerun of Family Feud or listening to (at mind-blowing decibels) gangsta rap.

And those pseudo Christians (CME detonation, as in go to church on “Christmas, Mothers Day and Easter” only), who only believe in those parts of the biblical that don’t inconvenience them, or in an evolving holy book that changes with the culture and times, should do likewise.

But to those who believe, if not fully understand, Evans’ words should provide food for thought.

Citing biblical scripture, Rev. Evans noted in his article that when early society was falling apart, God further “troubled them with every kind of distress because they continued to reject the knowledge of God.”

He theorized that our current plight could be traced to Christians’ failure to advance God’s Kingdom, to spread the faith and to do it in a loving, unified way.

Our nation’s ills are not merely the result of corruption or racism, Evans theorized. “Our troubles can also be traced directly to ineffective Christians.

“One of the real tragedies today is that the church as a whole has not furthered God’s light, equity, love and principals in our land in order to be a positive influence and impact for good in the midst of darkness, fears and hate,” he continued.

That is because far too often, we have limited the definition of the church, to being an “informational, inspirational weekly gathering rather than the group of people that God has ordained to operate on His behalf on earth in order to bring heaven’s viewpoint into history.

“There needs to be a recalibrating of many of our churches to the unified purpose of the Kingdom of God,” he declared.

It is about time more churches start using the keys God provided them to the kingdom to unlock doors, so that we get greater heavenly intervention in our earthy catastrophe.

That’s not to negate the good work of hundreds of churches, he continued, but what Christians have been ineffective at, is a unity that increases “our impacts on a large collective level.

“When we unite as so many churches did during the civil rights movement, we can bring hope and healing where we as a nation need it most.”

The congregation must come together to pray with what the Bible calls a “solemn assembly,” “meaning a sacred gathering with prayer and fasting to invite God’s manifest presence to reemerge in the culture.”

The church must also move people from membership to discipleship, he said. Just being members of the church is not good enough anymore. “We need visible, verbal followers of Jesus the Christ who are public with their witness and trained how to do that. If the church doesn’t train people to do that, it has failed.

Unless the church steps forward, carries out the mission, the country will continue spiraling downward into the depots of fear and hate.

“And above all, we must not let fear or hatred divide us. Peace, unity, love and nonviolence should be our rallying cry and the catalyst for change in our nation.

“Through this, we can seek to transform the remnants of tragedy into the foundation of a stronger, more equitable future.”

URBAN My DIALOGUE...

By Torre “ToeJoe” Johnson

Can one person be the key to the success or failure of the Black community?

Can one person or entity be the problem plaguing the Black community? What prevents us from becoming totally free?

My entrance into this life as a Black person in Milwaukee could not have been any better orchestrated in leading me toward the path I walk today. Being born one year after Medgar Evers and President John Kennedy were assassinated, and two months before Malcolm X’s assassination, my young eyes saw the pain, fear and anger many Blacks had after Dr. Martin Luther King’s and the aforementioned other assassinations. I remember my mother having to get to work before curfew passing through the National Guard stop points. I even remember seeing a few tanks. So today, I admit then I may have formed some type of hate for authority figures.

As My journey continued through Black Milwaukee I watched the community we once shared with many starting to become our own. The Whites began moving out as we continued our freedom fight for fair housing, education and employment. Black Milwaukee, at that time, seemed to be a great place to live and grow. Everyone seemed so proud to be always greeted with a smile, or a hug and laughter.

Then a change began to occur. Maybe we as a people began giving up on ourselves fighting over who would stay in the fields and who would live in the mansions.

I wonder did we forget about protecting the future of the children, the future of our existence? What were we thinking after we obtained homes, only to turn around and sell them; even our businesses

Did the Black on Black killings that continue to this day, begin after many of our Black professionals and decent job holders went running to the suburbs and private subsections in a fit of selfish behavior?

They left behind Black people who were not financially or mentally stable enough to fend for themselves against the attacks from slumlords, drugs dealers and poverty predators; hoping and praying the next messiah was coming?

The times have changed but the thinking and actions of the same type of predators hasn’t. Despite the challenge we continue to face, we need to bond together to form a movement that will resist and change our condition. The only reason we haven’t done it to this point is because many of us haven’t had the proper guidance. I truly believe this.

That’s why it’s important for me to be able to recognize our weaknesses and strengths from years gone by so we don’t keep making the same today and tomorrow. We as Black people must separate fantasy from reality. We must believe and know self-love is the key

Okay, can one person or entity be the problem plaguing the Black community?

The answer is: Yes! Each individual problem affects a community as a whole. We must come together and stand against all violence and the lack of growth and a lack of knowledge that prevents Black development within our community. We must break the chains of our self-bondage so we can conquer our demons with total Peace with justice

RELIGIOUS COMMENTARY

The Preachers: Jamal Bryant, E. Dewey Smith Jr., John Gray and Orrick Quick FOX SCREENSHOT

Can The Preachers Be Saved?

Pastors Jamal Bryant, John Gray, E. Dewey Smith Jr. and Orrick Quick co-host this sanctified version of The Real, but after a mere two episodes, it's clear this daytime talk show needs Jesus.

BY Michael Arceneaux, courtesy of theroot.com, originally posted July 13

Does the world need a saved version of The Real?

According to Jamal Bryant, a co-host of The Preachers, “There’s never been more of a need for a show like this.”

The faith-based panel show, currently on a three-week test run in New York and Los Angeles, features “four outspoken preachers known for their unique takes on pop culture, news events and spirituality.”

The four are Bryant, John Gray, E. Dewey Smith Jr., and Orrick Quick. Considering that Bryant is the same man who has employed phrases in his sermons such as “sanctified sissies,” while quoting Chris Brown’s “These hos ain’t loyal” lyric, there’s legitimate reason to find his claim of The Preachers’ necessity rather dubious.

Mere minutes into the show’s first segment on debut day, such suspicions were confirmed.

During a discussion about the Black Lives Matter movement and police brutality, while Smith did acknowledge the role racism plays in policing, he discussed the work of his law-enforcement-working uncle before asking, “Does a black police officer’s life matter?”

Then, Quick offered the following analogy: “If you have three children and one of them breaks curfew, would you punish all children? So my question is why would we punish every police officer as if they pulled the trigger?”

A better question is why would one want to contribute to the false narrative that critics of bad policing are generalizing all who work in law enforcement?

After that came Gray, who acknowledged that he had been racially profiled in his “very nice neighborhood” in Houston while he sat in his car parked in his driveway.

When Bryant asked the panel what should be done moving forward, Gray decided that instead of being “bitter” and “disillusioned,” he would opt to “go to the police department with gifts to introduce myself.” Gray also thanked the police for what they do, noting it was “his job to initiate peace and be the bridge-builder.”

A cameraperson then panned to an applauding group of nonblack women, none of whom will likely ever have to know what it is like to feel tortured by those who have taken a sworn oath to serve and protect all. It may be Gray’s job to initiate peace as a pastor, but such rules do not apply to black people who find themselves judged guilty due to bigotry by someone donning a badge.

Throughout the premiere episode and in numerous interviews and promos touting the show, it was celebrated that there is now a show with four men—notably black men—on TV. However, like the talk show hosted by Tyrese and Rev. Run on OWN earlier this year, we know that being black, or being black and male alone, is not enough.

Do we need a homophobic pastor with this large a platform? Do we need black clergymen preaching messages of docility to hurting black folks on national television?

What good is your melanin count if your messaging is messy?

Still, being a forgiving person like Beyoncé by the end of Lemonade, I opted to give this show another chance. Wednesday’s episode launched with more hot topics—among them Azealia Banks’ bleaching her skin. Bryant, who fancies himself quite nicely, and makes that very clear on the show, made a joke about Lil’ Kim and Azealia Banks using a two-for-one deal on bleaching cream.

WWJD? Probably not say that. One of the other panelists then likened skin bleaching to cosmetic surgery and not wanting to be in “God’s image.” Well, that’s certainly one, facile, hyperbolic way of viewing cosmetic surgery.

After this came a discussion about cohabitation, and with it, the potency of my nerves:

Just because society has changed doesn’t mean the word

Lack of permit halts street march

manders, led by Assistant Chief James Harpole, where in the park to tell the Hamilton matriarch Maria Hamilton--and her son Nate Hamilton, who arrived 20 minutes later--that they could not hold their march because they did not have a permit.

In a statement released before the rally and protest Tuesday, Chief Ed Flynn "encouraged" protestors to obtain a permit for their demonstration. Because they did not have a permit, they could not march in the street, but had to stay on the sidewalks and take a designated route or be arrested.

Both Nate and his mother noted that they have never gotten a permit to march and protest in the two years they have been leading demonstrations following the death of Dontre. "They want to prevent us from making a statement (by protesting) said Maria Hamilton after talking to Harpole and other police commanders.

She said seeing a beer garden in the park was an "insult to my child who died in this park."

Maria Hamilton noted that all over the nation, people were coming together to demonstrate the deaths of Sterling and Castile. But in Milwaukee, the authorities were prohibiting demonstrators from doing so because demonstrators would be making it harder for people who work downtown from going home.

"My child (Dontre) can't go home."

Saying they're has never been a beer garden in Red Arrow Park, Maria Hamilton believed it was a tactic of the Milwaukee Police in order to prevent them from demonstrating there, adding police want to "control the narrative" of the protests and expression of feelings by a segment of the community that wants to see real change.

"If some people are uncomfortable...good...it means they know what's happening. We have a right to be in these streets and tell our story."

As noted, the MPD in the past has always been on the perimeter of the park or the marches.

But Tuesday there were police in plain view--up close--with their squad cars, tactical vehicles and personnel, bicycle cops, police vans and mounted police. They were either lined up parked along wells or following closely as the demonstrators eventually marched ON THE SIDE-WALK with their signs and chants to shut down the city if they and the community they represented didn't get the justice they were entitled to under the law.

During a heated exchange in the park before the march, Harple said some 50 police officers had to be pulled from "violent neighborhoods" to make sure the demonstration doesn't violate the law.

Nate Hamilton encouraged Harpole, commanders and officers to march with the demonstrators in a show of love, unity and solidarity. By their very silence at Nate Hamilton's offer, the police commanders declined.

After marching from the park, to the site where Bastille Days was still being set up, down Cathedral Square, marching west down Wisconsin Avenue, to Fourth Street, up State Street back to Red Arrow Park, protestors joined hands and made a heart-shaped circle on the area of the ice skating rink.

One of the Coalition organizers told the gathering that they would be holding a mass meeting to discuss and strategise it next moves. Thursday, July 14, at All Peoples Church, 5975 N. 40th St., starting at 6 p.m.

As the protest ended, bike cops left, riding through the park next to the demonstrators, immediately followed by SUVs pulling horse stalls driving down Water Street past the Marcus Center. Out of eyesight of the marchers, once could imagine other police vehicles leaving as well to the main police station on State street or other precincts in or near the downtown area.

The demonstrations were officially over...for now!

"So we're the bad people?"

by Arthur Clements

So we're the bad people?

Y'all chase away the black people?

Ain't y'all the same ones brought us on them boats?

And now I see y'all getting angry cause we start to get hope.

A lot of privileges is for y'all.

You didn't think we'd show y'all.

South park token president yeah so called. But he ain't help me. He most likely helped y'all. 17 couldn't buy swears but in jail I was an adult.

Now this some messed up stuff. It feels like we are in a pit and I'll be dumb to not go legit.

Cause if not in a cell I'm going to sit. That's where I wrote this they had me caged up like a pit. I had to note this.

Had to focus. Open my mind up and let my brain swarm locust. Arresting more kids.

But remember y'all needed workers. It was that or y'all a etheit hurt us. Years later now my people murder. Ironical right.

No cause things haven't change. The systems the plantation probations emancipation.

So soon as you get in prison you lose all determination.

They waiting to catch you slipping. They waiting to catch you stealing. So open your eyes this can't be the life we living and we have to stop sagging.

They have figured out a way of killing pulling yo pants up kind of look like a heat you clinching. And start telling the children they need to stay out detention.

The school is key so tell your children to listen.

Cause off there test scores is how there building them prisons. And heavens a mission. So if you want to succeed you got to stay away from tension.

I don't blame my people everybody just listen. Cause when we came to this country we had no comprehension. Assimilations.

Former State Rep. Jason Fields and Executives of CK Gates and Associates gear up to Launch Operation Technical U-Turn!

Former state Rep. Jason Fields and executives from CK Gates & Associates are preparing to launch a technology-sector certification training program in Milwaukee.

The goal: Train and certify large numbers of underemployed and unemployed Black and other underprivileged young men/women in Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities in high-tech software.

"This is a great opportunity for the 11th Assembly District residents and the Milwaukee community to get behind my Jobs and economic plan, by supporting a program that focuses on the demand side of job creation by offering training within professional service careers that involve leading with innovation and creative energy to enhance the growth of our middle Class", said Fields, who is seeking to return to public office by campaigning in his former 11th assembly district.

Said Carlton Gates, "Whether it be Microsoft, Oracle, or Cisco Systems, Operation Technical U-Turn will offer the Milwaukee Community the potential to reap the following benefits:

- Stable highly technical skill that cannot be outsourced abroad.
- Significant increase in high income earners in the community overwhelmed by low income employment, skills and crime.
- High income taxpayers for the city, county and state of Wisconsin.
- Increase in the number of diverse candidates for companies and other organizations.
- Proactive versus reactive approach to underdeveloped communities in Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities."

The program would focus on recruiting the right individuals. Those with the best chance to succeed. The goal being a very high rate!

- Training facility that is easily accessible
  - Laptops and other technology incorporated into the program
  - Mentoring throughout the entire training, certification and initial employment process
  - Recruitment of employers prior to class completion and certification
- "It is our goal to bring this program to the Wisconsin Legislature and seek bi-partisan support that will help improve the quality of life for the 11th Assembly District as well as the City of Milwaukee", said Fields!

MCJ EDITORIAL

The President said we can no longer deny the underlying current that exacerbates these feelings of frustration and anger. And as the Chief of the Dallas Police Department, David O. Brown said: "We are being called upon to do everything. Everything that the city has failed to do, the family has failed to do, the schools have failed to do and the mental institutions can no longer do, because they are now non-existent. Our officers are being called to serve in all of these capacities, it's too much."

Today, the police have to arrest the mentally deranged, forcing them into jails and courts, when in fact they need hospitals and health and medications that balance them.

President Obama reminded us that in many urban neighborhoods, too often, it's easier to go and find a 9mm Glock than it is to find a job or a book. Too often schools have been denied the money needed to keep our education system competitive with other nations. And neighborhoods are too often devoid of businesses where youth can find jobs, where they learn a work ethic and take advantage of opportunities to climb the employment ladders that lead to full employment and economically stable families.

As youth all over the country are marching non-violently, one has to understand the need for people to hear what they are saying. They have a right to get the public's attention.

They need the opportunity to dialogue about what must be done to augment their lives. Their message is a mandatory outgrowth that cannot be ignored. And, the youth must organize and work through their agenda so that when they sit down, they know what they are asking for.

Dialogues take talking and listening. The dialogues have to be about more than just "being angry"...or "being tired". Our young people are mature enough to garner our attention. Consider now creating discussions and collaborations and workable first phase, second phase, third phase agendas and strategies.

As we look back on the Civil Rights movement of the late fifties and sixties, there were identifiable leaders, who huddled and created strategies that could be executed in local communities throughout the country.

Strategies like making certain your votes count.

Strategies like electing officials who will going be sensitive and committed to bringing about legislation that will change the face of the Supreme Court, that was going to integrate schools and colleges, that was going to increase employment opportunities in federal institutions, and the armed services, so that representation of these places mirrored the percentage of people by race and gender.

Later policies like affirmative action and equal opportunity became doable strategies that still play out in communities throughout the country, even though many have now been erased from the books. They must be revisited. That's a strategy.

We encourage our young people to really understand the "movement." Seek to bring about the non-violent change that is desired and must be. But shooting cops is not the answer. Marching for the sake of marching is not the only answer. Strategizing and creating new forums for consideration may be the most valuable strategy for the youth of today.

Our youth are the most computer savvy, the most intelligent. And while some disparity continues to short-change us, the majority of millennials, today, are looking for authenticity, legitimacy and relevance for their generation. They are the future.

We look to support you, our children, our grandchildren, our future husbands and wives. Education, better paying jobs, respect, and safety for our families and neighborhoods has to be the major strategy. As it was for our generation (and we apologize that we let you down. We did not keep the metal to the pedal, but now you must!)

Death, more death, more vigils has not worked. But mindful strategizing with a master plan for making the changes, will. YOU HAVE OUR ATTENTION!

Now do the hard work. Tell us what you want, research how it can happen and tell us not only that you want it, tell us you have a strategy that is doable.

A good strategy has to respect the cops, the community, the youth and all families. Good strategies benefit all. You can do it. You are our Voices...tell us!

Can The Preachers Be Saved?

has.

There is a difference between what is legal and what is moral.

Sex before marriage blinds you from a person's character.

If sex blinds you from a person's character, you have the judgment of a dying woodpecker. As fate, or in this case, faith would have it, as cringeworthy as those remarks were, they weren't the worst part of the episode. Such honors would go to the first interview of the show with Omarosa.

Though Omarosa bragged about her past interviews with the likes of Oprah and appearances on The View, more recently, she has been the go-to guest for newer daytime talk shows. One, 'cause she won't miss a chance to be on camera, and two, she'll provide conflict.

Such was the case on The Preachers as she argued with Bryant, who once served as her "spiritual adviser" on her TV One show co-produced by Donald Trump. In other words, this new, and purportedly necessary, new forum did the Christian equivalent of Omarosa's interview with Bethenny Frankel.

Meanwhile, note that Omarosa shouted out the ladies while "sipping the tea," which was lifted from gay black men. The church is used to pretending gay men don't exist, so I shouldn't be shocked the church-as-a-talk-show would do the same.

For former executive producer and co-creator of The View Bill Geddie, who runs this show, I imagine it was sold on the notion that blacks will follow their pastors to daytime TV. We'll find out in due time, but I've already ordered an Uber for my escape route.

While closing one segment, Bryant declared, "Yo breath gon' stank if you change the channel."

Hand me a mint.

Pragmatic Airway Resuscitation Trial (PART) Risk/Benefit Public Announcement

Researchers at the Medical College of Wisconsin are studying the best ways to treat Cardiac Arrest.

This notice is to inform you of a research study on cardiac arrest that will begin in Milwaukee County in August 2016. The study will be led by the Medical College of Wisconsin and Milwaukee County Emergency Medical Services (EMS). Cardiac arrest is a major public health problem. There are about 400,000 cardiac arrest cases in the U.S. every year and only about 10% of people survive. This national study will compare two airway tubes that are used by EMS providers to keep a person's airway open to give them oxygen during a cardiac arrest. This study could affect any person with cardiac arrest that is helped by Milwaukee County EMS. This study is also being done in Birmingham Alabama, Dallas Texas, Pittsburgh Pennsylvania, and Portland Oregon.

What happens when someone has a Cardiac Arrest?

A Cardiac Arrest is when a person's heart suddenly stops beating. When the heart stops beating it is an emergency because blood does not reach important organs like the brain, lungs or kidneys. This can injure these organs. EMS providers treat cardiac arrest by performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). This includes breathing for the person by inserting an airway tube into their windpipe to keep their airway open to give them oxygen. EMS providers currently use one of two airway tubes – an "endotracheal tube" or a "laryngeal tube."

Why do we need to do this research?

Right now both of these airway tubes are approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and are commonly used by EMS providers. Both methods are used by Milwaukee County EMS, but prior studies have not shown whether one works better than the other. The reason for this study is to compare the endotracheal tube to the laryngeal airway tube to see if one is better for patients.

Are there risks to this research?

All research has risks. Using either of these airway tubes has potential risks, including: not being able to place the airway, having to try more than once to place the airway, the tube being placed incorrectly, the tube not allowing enough air to pass into the lungs, vomiting after placing the tube, injury to the throat/mouth area, and a collapsed lung. These risks have been carefully examined and found to be small and reasonable given the possible benefits to patients. Patients who have been enrolled in this study will get all other regular treatments for cardiac arrest. All information obtained from the study will be kept private. The findings from this study will be shared at meetings and in scientific journals to help others, but information that could identify a person will not be used.

What is the benefit of this research?

This study may help others in the future. One type of airway tube used during cardiac arrest could be better for people than the other. People will not receive money for being in this research study and it will not cost a person anything.

If you are an adult and live in Milwaukee County, you may be in this study.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency and the EMS providers have to act quickly to treat a person. This means that there is no time to get permission. People with cardiac arrest are unconscious and cannot agree to join. In studies like this, a person's consent is not possible. This type of research is called an exception from informed consent for emergency circumstances and is approved by the FDA. If you do not want to be in this study you must ask to not be included. You will be sent a bracelet or necklace to wear that tells EMS that you are not part of the study. You will still receive all regular treatments. The FDA requires that researchers notify communities in cases when research is being done and consent is not possible due to an emergency (FDA Code of Federal Regulations, Title 21, Section 50.24).

Opting out of this study Anyone who does not wish to be enrolled in this study may opt-out by wearing an opt-out bracelet or necklace. The Milwaukee County EMS providers are trained to not enroll anyone who is wearing this bracelet or necklace. An opt-out bracelet or necklace may be requested free of charge by either calling the Resuscitation Research Center at (414) 805-6493 or email at RRC@mcw.edu

If you do not want to be in this study, you can let the researchers know.

If you have questions or concerns about this study or you do not want to participate, please contact Dr. M. Riccardo Colella, either by phone (414-805-6493), mail (Department of Emergency Medicine, 9200 W. Wisconsin Ave., Froedtert Hospital East, PV1, Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53226 or email (RRC@mcw.edu), or visit the web site at (www.mcw.edu/ROCPART). Feedback from the community may be used to change the study.
