Home Remodeling Politics

Our political preferences influence more than just the way we vote. According to HomeAdvisor's 2016 True Cost Report, generational and political aspects also influence the way we approach home projects!

Article courtesy of the Home Advisor via Family Features

If you're voting Democrat this fall, you're more likely than your Republican-voting counterparts to spend the extra money to hire a professional for your home projects.

Political affiliations have a tendency to directly affect attitudes and decision-making regarding home repair and improvement projects, according to the findings of a recent HomeAdvisor survey. But with improving labor and real estate markets – and an upcoming presidential election – how does partisan thinking factor into home improvement?

As it turns out, home improvement spending crosses political lines. According to HomeAdvisor's 2016 True Cost Report, all homeowners – Democrats and Republicans alike – are focusing on remodeling, routine maintenance and repair, and energy and security projects.

In fact, in the last 12 months the number of homeowners who reported completion of two home maintenance and repair projects increased nearly 12 percent.

Additionally, many homeowners said they expect to increase spending on major home improvement projects in 2016.

So what's with the bi-partisan boom?

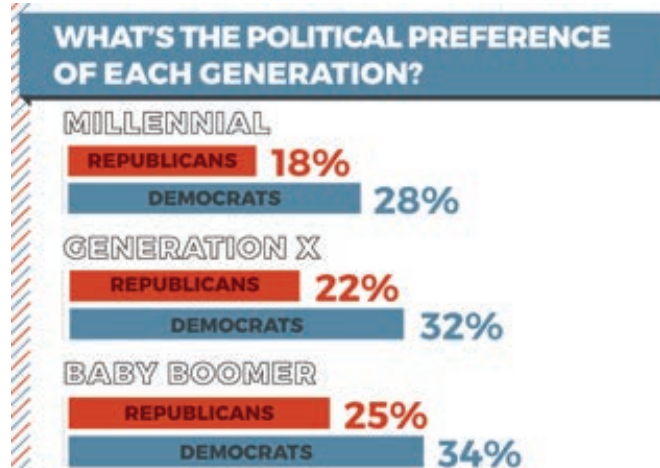

"We attribute this rise to the shrinking housing inventories and increasing home prices, which provide equity for homeowners to boost the enjoyment and monetary values of their existing properties," said Leah Ingram, HomeAdvisor's cost advisor.

While Republicans and Democrats are both spending money to improve their homes, it's how they're spending it that's different.

According to the survey, Republican homeowners are nearly 20 percent more likely than Democrat homeowners to complete home projects when they think it will be too expensive to hire a professional.

Further, Democrats are more likely than Republicans to hire professionals and perform project-related research – and they're also willing to pay 1.5 times as much as Republicans on home maintenance and repair projects.

Republicans and Democrats may differ politically, but due to an upswing in the U.S. labor and real estate markets, it's a fact that bi-partisan home improvement spending is on the rise. For more information, visit homeadvisor.com.

Millenials and Baby Boomers complete more home projects than Generation X.

Don't Wait! Communicate! Make Your Emergency Plan Today!

National Preparedness

Month Launches this Month

CHICAGO –September is National Preparedness Month, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) encourages everyone to make disaster preparedness a priority.

“National Preparedness Month serves as a reminder that we all need to prepare for disasters and emergencies,” said Andrew Velasquez III, FEMA Region V Administrator.

“Plan in advance so your family knows what to do if a disaster strikes: how you will get to a safe place; how you will contact one another; how you will get back together; and what you will do in different emergency situations.”

Severe weather and other emergencies can strike with little or no warning and can have disastrous impacts. Already this year, the Midwest has experienced several waves of destructive storms, tornadoes and flooding.

Whether at home or on the go, be aware of emergency plans in place wherever your family spends their time: work, daycare and school, houses of worship, sports events and commuting. Be disaster ready, wherever you may be.

It's simple to start planning for emergencies: download the Family Communication Plan for Parents and Kids on Ready.gov/make-a-plan and fill out the sections before printing it or emailing it to your family and friends.

Consider also downloading the free FEMA app, available for your Android, Apple or Blackberry device, so you have the information at your fingertips to prepare for severe weather.

Throughout the month, FEMA will offer tips to help you be better prepared, including steps you can take to protect yourself and your family.

Follow FEMA Region V online at twitter.com/femaregion5 and www.facebook.com/fema, to receive the latest preparedness updates.

For detailed information about how to be ready for severe weather in your area, including a list of items you will want to have in your emergency kit, visit www.ready.gov, or our Spanish site at www.listo.gov.

Feel Good About Clearing Clutter

(Family Features) Whether spring or summer, extended breaks from the day-to-day routines are great for making new family memories. They are also great for taking some time to recall previous ones often found in items around the house.

From those old baby clothes and toys to books and dusty tech you haven't touched in years, these "memories" may be cluttering your home. Spend some time as a family and clear out what you no longer need.

For some extra motivation, approach your cleaning with a fresh perspective: donating your gently-used items will help others while freeing up space for new memories.

Get on your way to a cleaner, less cluttered home with these tips:

Take it one room at a time.

Whether you live in a modest apartment or a sprawling single-family home, overhauling your entire living space at once is an overwhelming prospect. Instead, focus on one room at a time with a timeframe that makes sense for your schedule.

Don't save the worst for last. Avoid the temptation to leave your messiest catch-all room for the end.

Instead, tackle it first and spend extra time thinking about where you can reassign some of the clutter, so it's not all accumulating in a single room.

Give items meaning. Take a cue from stylist, author and TV host Emily Henderson and implement a rule that items you keep should be at least two of three things: functional, sentimental and beautiful.

If an item is none of these (like an old food storage container without a lid), toss it. Especially if you are low on space, only hang on to those items that serve two or more roles.

Sort your stuff into piles. In every room, you'll find items you need to keep close at hand, others you'd like to keep but could be stashed away, things that may have value to others and stuff that simply needs to be trashed.

Look for ways to give back. While it sometimes makes sense to resell unwanted items online or through a yard sale, donating is another way you can give these goods a second life and help bring warmth, happiness and smiles to others.

Through its Glad to Give program, the Glad Products Company makes donating easy because you can fill a Glad Force-Flex bag, stretch it and stuff it with just about anything you want to donate.

Clothing is one of the best things to donate so others can make better use of the gently-loved items you are hoarding, Henderson said.

Unless a garment has been worn in the last four seasons, donate it. Other prime candidates for donating: toys, sports equipment, DVDs and home gadgets.

Organize what remains. Once you've cleared the clutter and determined which items will stay, find attractive ways to create order and manage the mess.

You can choose from a wide range of organizational options – everything from shelves and baskets to storage furniture and closet systems – to help make the most of your space and reveal more inviting rooms that make you feel comfortable at home.

Find resources for giving back, and schedule a free local donation pickup for an organization of your choice, at GladtoGive.com.

5 Tricks for a Chore-Free Weekend

(Family Features) When thinking about errands, check-lists and even downtime, every busy person wishes there were more hours in the day. When tight on time, chores have a way of piling up and spilling into free time. With the right routine, however, day-to-day tasks can be tackled throughout the week, paving the way to a chore-free weekend, which means more time for the fun stuff.

"I am a firm believer that the weekend is meant for relaxation," said Becky Rapinchuk, cleaning expert from Clean Mama and author of "The Organically Clean Home." "My secret to a chore-free weekend? Address items on your to-do list day by day, rather than tackling the entire house at once."

Along with the right tools, Rapinchuk recommends carving out 30 minutes each weekday for an easy five-day cleaning routine made up of the following simple tips and tricks:

- Monday: Tackle the most hated space to clean – the bathroom – on Monday so you're not dreading the chore all week long. To start, grab a dish wand and load it up with your favorite tile cleaner to scrub the shower grout. Once you're done, clear the countertop, wipe down the sink, and give the toilet a deep cleaning. Spritz a light scent on towels or the shower curtain to leave the space smelling fresh on your way out.

- Tuesday: Dishes not coming out clean from the dishwasher? Run the water in your kitchen sink until it's hot and then start the dishwasher. This will pump hot water throughout the washer's cycle, as opposed to starting off cold and then turning warm. The hot water not only does a better job of cleaning your dishes, but it is also critical in killing any germs living on glassware and flatware.

- Wednesday: Multi-purpose tools are key when looking to save time. The Scotch-Brite Scrubbing Dish Cloth, for example, features everything you love about your dish cloth – absorbency and versatility – plus scrubbing dots on one side that power through stuck-on messes on cookware, glassware and counters without scratching. When you're done, the cloth rinses clean and dries quickly, ready for any kitchen mishaps during your weekend festivities.

- Thursday: Ease into the weekend by dusting surfaces in your home, including televisions, shelving, dressers and nightstands. A little known trick for surfaces such as rugs or lampshades that dust likes to cling to? Use a lint roller with strong adhesive.

- Friday: Round out the week with a focus on floors by sweeping, vacuuming and mopping the most used rooms. If you find a new stain on the carpet, blot it up with club soda and a heavy-duty scrub sponge. If it remains, add a drop of dish soap and blot it back into the stain, but don't rub. Rinse with cool water and continue to blot as the sponge absorbs the solution while not pilling or ruining the fabric. After a few minutes, the carpet should be dry and the stain should be gone.

Tips for Tackling Storm-Related Roof Damage

(Family Features) Having your home severely damaged by a storm can turn your world upside down. The damage could simply be cosmetic, or so extensive as to render your home uninhabitable. In either case, you need to act fast, but smart, to ensure that your home will be properly repaired.

Often, foremost among your concerns will be your roof, as it protects the rest of your home and possessions. Start your post-storm repair process with these tips from the experts at CertainTeed Roofing.

1. Keep safety first. Leave emergency repairs to the professionals. A crisis that affects your home is an emotional event, but your safety is paramount. Do not attempt any emergency repairs unless you are qualified to do so.

2. Prepare for your insurance adjuster. Take time to do your own documentation. Take plenty of photos and notes on the damage to your home.

This information will become a helpful checklist to compare against the insurance company's findings.

When it comes to the roof, check outside for things such as blown off shingles, damaged gutters and large branches that may have fallen onto your home. Also, if you can safely access your attic, examine the underside of your roof for damage or leaks.

3. Find the right contractor.

You will want to interview at least three contractors for your roof repair. This allows you to compare prices, work styles and other factors before making your selection. Here are some key questions to ask:

- Are you a credentialed installer? Most shingle manufacturers have strict guidelines for installation. These assure that you get the best performance and meet the requirements for the product and/or workmanship warranty.

For example, CertainTeed Roofing issues education-based credentials such as the ShingleMaster or SELECT ShingleMaster.

- Do you have storm experience? Some contractors are experienced in storm restoration and trained in storm damage evaluation and repair.

These are the contractors you want when dealing with an insurance claim.

- Where is your business located? You will want a local contractor with an established business location who can provide at least four to five references. This way, if you need to follow up for any reason, they will be easy to reach.

- Do you carry liability and worker's comp insurance? Your contractor should be fully insured with liability and workers compensation insurance. This will protect you should any workers get hurt during the repair process.

- Are you licensed with the state or municipality? The answer to this question may be no, as not all states or municipalities have licensing requirements for roofing contractors. If licensing is required, there are websites, such as the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation, where you can look up a company's status.

- Check for special repair designations required by your insurance.

In some instances, insurance companies require that certain materials be used in the repair of your home. In areas prone to hail storms, for example, you may be required to install shingles that are classified as impact resistant, which stand up better to hailstorms.

Find more tips to help guide your roof repair, and find qualified installers in your area, at CertainTeed.com.
