Kareem Speaks!

Legendary former Milwaukee Bucks star and NBA champion Kareem Abdul-Jabbar speaks on wide-range of social issues at Milwaukee Theater

Moderator Ubaydullah Evans listens intently as NBA legend Kareem Abdul Jabbar makes a point during his Distinguished Lecture Series talk at the Milwaukee Theater.

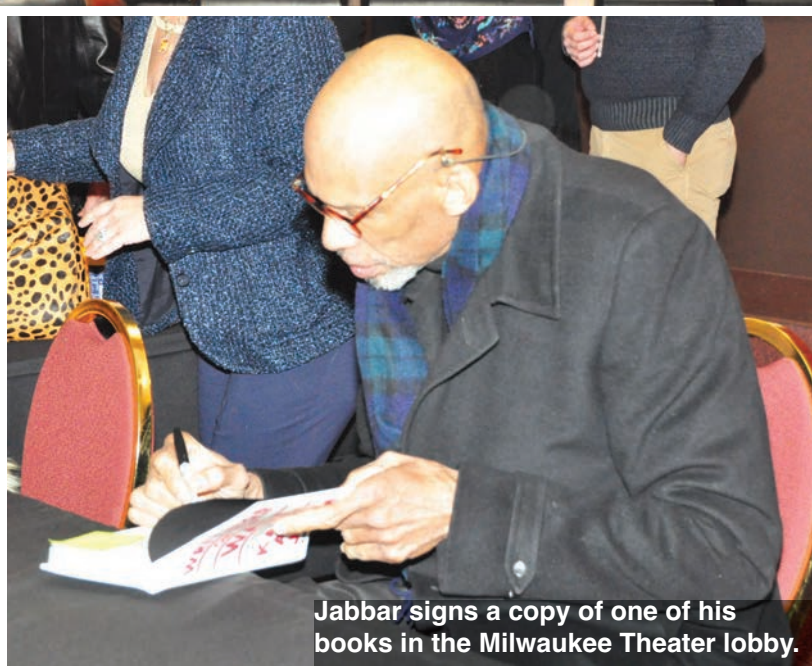

Milwaukee Bucks legend and six-time NBA champion Kareem Abdul Jabbar shared his views on race, religion, the vote, his life and--of course--basketball during his recent keynote appearance at the Distinguished Lecture Series at the Milwaukee Theater downtown.

Among the myriad of sponsors for the lecture was the the University of Wisconsin Milwaukee (UWM) Muslim Student Association, Islamic Society of Milwaukee, and the Milwaukee Muslim Women's Coalition.

During his 90-minute address to UWM students, faculty and Bucks fans, Jabbar explained his love/hate relationship with the media, growing up in Harlem during the 1950 and early 60s, why he changed his name from Lew Alcindor to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and how the game of basketball has dramatically changed with the advent of the three-point shot.

The 19-time NBA all-star and all-time league leading scorer offered his insights on his experiences as an African American convert to Islam and the role his identity and beliefs played in his life, in overcoming adversity and

White House journalist keynotes sixth annual Fit To A Tea

White House journalist and author April D. Ryan (at right) shared her unique perspectives on covering the White House as the only Black female reporter covering urban issues from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue--a position she has held since the Clinton era-- during the sixth annual "Fit To A Tea" event that focuses on eliminating health and financial disparities for women of color.

Cong. Moore blasts GOP healthcare plan to replace Obamacare

Compiled by MCJ Staff

U.S. Cong. Gwen Moore decried Tuesday the Republicans plan to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act (ACA) former President Barack Obama's landmark health care reform bill.

"This bill is a self-inflicted wound that will exacerbate costs, limit protections, and hurt the 70 million Americans who rely on Medicaid, including pregnant women and vulnerable children," Moore said in a statement responding to the Republican proposal.

The Congresswoman's rebuke came after Republican House Speaker Paul Ryan introduced a long awaited GOP plan to replace President Obama's 2010 ACA law.

Absent of any specifics on the cost of the health proposal or how many Americans will be covered by it, the new bill aims to replace the ACA law with a system designed along conservative lines.

According to news reports, the plan would affect approximately 20 million Americans who purchase their own private health plans directly from an insurer and more than 70 million covered by Medicaid, the federal-state program for low-income people, which covers about one in five Americans.

Though the deductibles in Obama's ACA plan were admittedly high, the law did provide cost-sharing subsidies to people with modest incomes.

Those subsidies will be eliminated under the Republican plan, and it's unclear how high the deductibles would be under the new approach.

Republican authors of the new proposal say the bill will bring tremendous long-term savings by giving states more control over Medicaid.

The proposed legislation would also limit future federal funding of Medicaid. It would loosen rules that Obamacare imposed for health plans directly purchased by individuals, while also scaling back insurance subsidies.

However, Republican congressional lawmakers did retain popular aspects of Obamacare, such as insurance safeguards for people with pre-existing medical conditions, and parents' ability to keep their young adult children on their insurance until age 26.

To prod healthier people to buy policies, insurers would boost premiums by 30 percent for consumers who let insurance lapse.

As expected, Congressional Democrats like Moore leaped to the attack of the GOP plan. They charge the Republican plan would leave many people uninsured, shifting costs to states and hospital systems that act as providers of last resort.

Individual policy holders might be able to find low-premium plans, only to be exposed to higher deductibles and copayments.

PULSE OF THE COMMUNITY

Photos and question by Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

During the recent Black male teach-in at Martin Luther King School, we asked four adult participants this question: "How can we impress upon our children (especially Black boys) the importance of education in today's digital society as an avenue for success?"

"It's extremely important that 'today's' young Black collective understand how visual and digital communications world works, as a tool, to inform, distract, entertain and condition their world view. This particular generation is especially bombarded with more than 1,000 images a day. For this reason it's urgent that we arm our community with the ability to deconstruct as we build images to sustain a healthy body, mind and spirit."

Maurice Marshall
(art teacher)

"I think it's very important that adults model the expectations and behaviors that they want to see from children. Children do what they see."

Dannette Justus
(academic coach at Siefert elem.)

"The camera is always on! We see the bad too much, or the extreme success too much. You can always see negative press on Facebook, or see an athlete often on social media. We need to see more of our everyday successful men in the media. An event like this teach-in should get some media press considering the positive nature (of the event) and the 23 years this program has taken place."

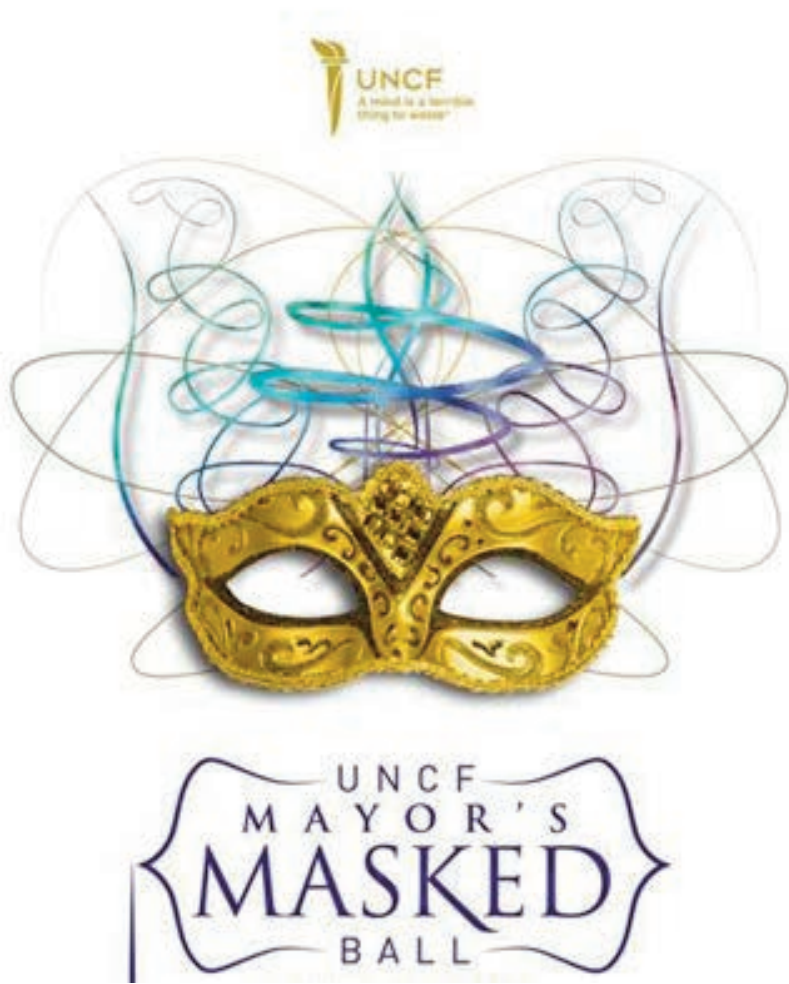

Trenton Edwards
(bank branch manager)

"Empowering our children with education is extremely important especially for our young African American males. We must help them understand that digital technology can be an instrument for success by using that knowledge to obtain jobs and information. We must teach them that there is power in knowledge!"

UNCF Milwaukee Mayor's Masked Ball March 18

Securing Quality Education for the Next Generation of Leaders

Influential Milwaukee women to be honored on city website, cable channel

In honor of International Women's Day on Wednesday, Alderwoman Milele A. Coggs announced that the City of Milwaukee will be honoring notable women in the city's history with a series of informational vignettes that will run on the front page of the city's website and the City Channel.

"From influential international leaders to entrepreneurs to civil rights icons, a diverse collection of women have shaped our city since its founding," Alderwoman Coggs said.

"With the events taking place tomorrow in recognition of International Women's Day, it is as important as ever to recognize the contributions that our sisters have made to this city."

The Women's History Milwaukee initiative will highlight seven iconic local figures in history—one each day over the course of a week.

More than 300 business, civic and education leaders from across Wisconsin are expected to attend the second annual UNCF Milwaukee Mayor's Masked Ball on March 18 at the Milwaukee Art Museum at 6 p.m. The event, hosted by the Honorable Tom Barrett, will help provide scholarship funds for area students and operating support to UNCF's 37 member institutions.

"With the continuous support of Mayor Barrett and the Wisconsin community, UNCF is able to make a tremendous impact on the lives of our young people," said Michael Cox, regional development director, UNCF.

"Through our Gates Millennium program, UNCF was able to award more than $525,000 in scholarships last year. Now more than ever, we must continue to come together to provide resources to the next generation of leaders—securing better futures for us all."

There are three Masked Award recipients for 2017 who will be honored for their dedication and support of UNCF's work and their commitment to advancing higher education.

The 2017 Masked Award honorees are: Dr. Howard Fuller, professor of education and director of the Marquette University Institute for the Transformation of Learning; Deborah McGriff, Ph.D., partner, New Schools Venture Fund; and Eric Von, acclaimed broadcast journalist and commentator.

Melinda Davenport, WISN-12 news anchor, will be mistress of ceremonies for the ball, which will feature a silent auction, elegant dining and dancing.

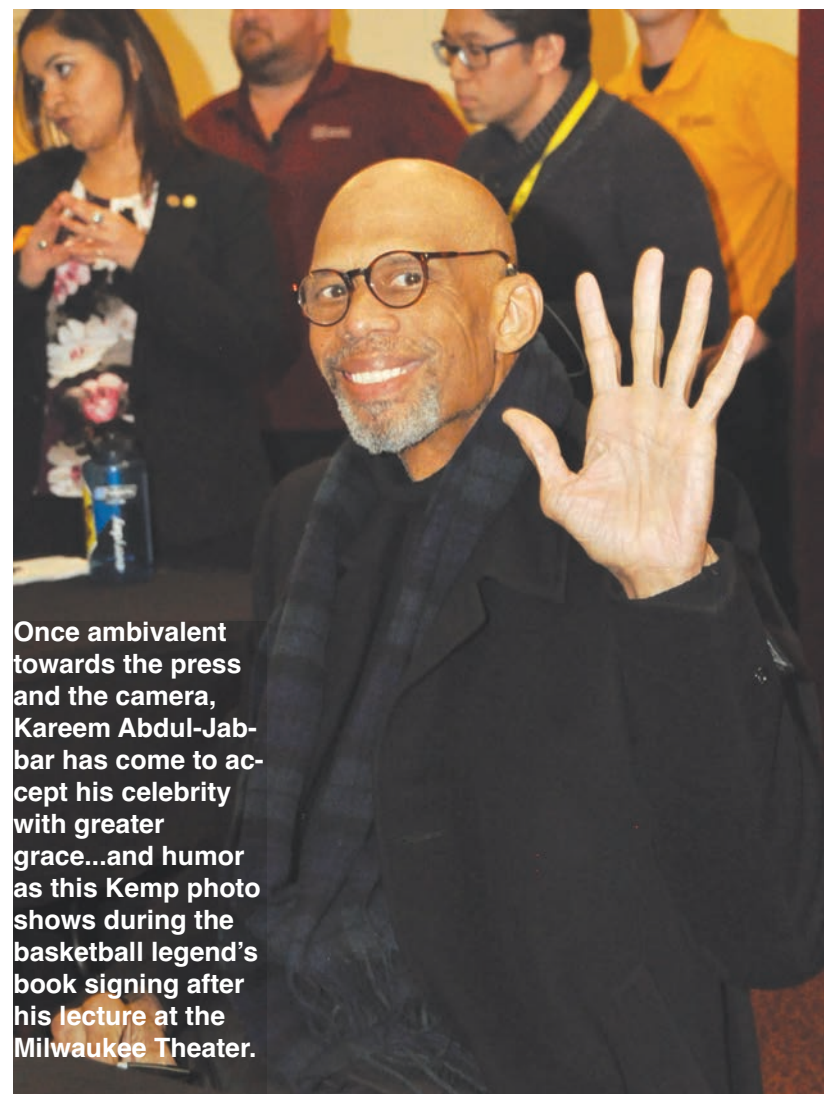

Chicago favorite Theresa Griffin Envision will provide the entertainment for the evening.

The event is made possible by presenting sponsor, Rockwell Automation along with donors Potawatomi Hotel & Casino, Johnson Controls, Baird, BMO Harris Bank, Associated Bank, Roundy's, SC Johnson: A Family Company, Northwestern Mutual and Town Bank.

For more information or to purchase tickets, visit <http://www.uncf.org/milwaukeeemb> or contact Julietta Henry at 414.975.9543; Julietta.henry@uncf.org

During this informational campaign, the official city website (city.milwaukee.gov) will feature photos and facts about the women of Milwaukee's history, and these same informational vignettes will also run regularly during City Channel programming.

The initiative will build up to Girls' Day at City Hall, the annual event that Alderwoman Coggs organizes to expose young women to career options in public service, engage them in their community and inspire them to achieve. The 7th Annual Girls' Day at City Hall is scheduled to take place on Thursday, March 16, and more information is available at milwaukee.gov/district6.

achieving success.

He was particularly pointed about the stereotypes his Muslim religion faces and must overcome, stressing that Muslims must be bridge builders while, at the same time, others outside the religion must understand Muslims are not the villains depicted in news reports who use the religion to justify their crimes.

Jabbar called Isis terrorists and the real villains, adding they are nothing more than "animalistic barbarians" who must be eliminated.

Aside from being a basketball legend, Jabbar is an activist, and has been from his days at UCLA speaking out on various issues related to race and sports. A respected author of 11 books and a contributor to newspapers and magazines, Jabbar is a respected writer and thought leader who is not afraid to weigh-in on controversial topics.

In 2016, Jabbar was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian award of the United States, by President Barack Obama.

PERSPECTIVES

Jeff Sessions is a lying bigot who should resign

Jefferson Beauregard Sessions, who has been the U.S. Attorney General for only a few weeks, may find himself out of a job at the rate he's going. But unemployment could be the least of his worries, in light of reports that he lied under oath during his confirmation hearing. Trump's top law enforcer, who plans to cause so much trouble to black people, Muslims, immigrants and others, now finds himself in his own deep trouble.

The Washington Post broke the news that Sessions spoke twice with Sergei Kislyak, the Russian ambassador to the U.S., in July and September of 2016, during the presidential campaign and when Sessions was a Trump adviser.

During the Jan. 10 confirmation hearing for attorney general, Sen. Al Franken (D-Minn.) asked Sessions what he would do if he learned someone in the Trump campaign communicated with Russian government officials during the campaign. "I'm not aware of any of those activities," Sessions said, adding, "I have been called a surrogate at a time or two in that campaign and I did not have communications with the Russians."

Following the breaking news, Democrats seized the opportunity to speak out against a man they did not believe should have been attorney general in the first place.

Rep. Elijah Cummings (D-Md.), ranking member of the House Oversight Committee, urged Sessions to resign from his post. "When Senator Sessions testified under oath that 'I did not have communications with the Russians,' his statement was demonstrably false, yet he let it stand for weeks — and he continued to let it stand even as he watched the President tell the entire nation he didn't know anything about anyone advising his campaign talking to the Russians," Cummings said in a statement.

"Attorney General Sessions should resign immediately, and there is no longer any question that we need a truly independent commission to investigate this issue," Cummings added. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) also called for Sessions to resign.

Meanwhile, if Sessions does resign — also facing possible perjury charges — the timing could not be better. It was well-known that the man was a civil rights nightmare with a long history of hostility to black people, affiliation with anti-immigration hate groups, and support for the Confederate cause.

In his new position heading the U.S. Department of Justice, Sessions has plans to crack down on state marijuana legalization. Under his watch, the government has retreated from the Texas voter ID case. And Sessions announced that his department will "pull back" from civil rights suits against police departments and no longer monitor troubled law enforcement agencies, focusing instead on violent crime and police morale.

Further, let's not forget, as Joy Reid reminds us, that Sessions brought other sketchy and unsavory individuals to the Trump White House.

Now, Sessions is one of a number of ethically challenged Trump advisers and cabinet members, making us wonder where all this is headed.

Don't look to the Justice Department for help if you're black, because if you do, you'll find yourself in trouble. But now, Jeff Sessions is the one in trouble. He is not fit to lead the Justice Department and prosecute people for crimes they may have committed, when he has been caught in a lie, in what appears to be a federal crime.

As attorney general, Jeff Sessions was going to put a lot of black people in prison — private prisons — to crack down on a rise in crime that exists only in the minds of those in the Trump administration. Now the man must resign, and if he's lucky, he won't find himself in jail.

URBAN My DIALOGUE...

By Torre "ToeJoe" Johnson

Giving Credit When Credit Is Due

There are many people who do the same work that I do, community building, organizing and activism. I've learned that credit, for them, is not important. For me, nothing is more important than getting the work accomplished, start to finish. I find importance in creating a cycle that will continue after those, like myself, are no longer a part of the project.

Approaching these issues and fragile situations often take caution, practice, as well as prayer. I never repeat something and expect the same outcome. Although it may be happening in the hood, each situation must be addressed and responded to differently.

There is nothing wrong with being acknowledged for your work. Acknowledgement is a tool used not only to make you work harder, but a boost for others to aim towards receiving the same props by accomplishing more.

Once, I went out and brought forty children to CYD who were all featured in the "Juneteenth" day parade. Mother Simpson and Mrs. Robinson were excited that day. I stayed at the house with Mother who was 103 years old. She asked me what was I doing there. I told her I accept the assignment of watching over her instead of being a part of the parade. She rose up and said "Boy, let me tell you this. Don't ever let anyone take credit for your work. Get your credit because you will not get much else." That following year I brought children instead of gathering the CYD children. I then became the parade coordinator. I will never forget Mother's words.

Not to leave out street credibility, once you have street cred, you begin changing into different lanes for the better. You begin hoping that others will follow. You have to have something to show, like collateral. Prove that you are not 'corny' or what they call 'square'. Credit is needed when you are a street innovator. It allows others to know and recognize your work and to encourage others to excel. Remember, if we are working in a society that will run a credit check on you, if your credibility doesn't hold up you might as well pack up and go somewhere else.

I am going to keep working. I am going to keep giving props when they are due. I will not get caught up in this celebration thing, because there is definitely a lot more work to be done in these city streets and darkened homes. Until next time I credit this to those that convinced me I no longer had to run.

A necessary evil

Donald Trump received eight percent of the Black vote (13% of Black men), an insignificant number of ballots in most political estimations, but enough to create tremors in the Democratic Party stranglehold over Black America.

The Trump votes, when coupled with Black apathy—or disdain for the political process—were enough to alter history and put in the White House a man some now fear is not only a pathological liar and egotist, but an unstable demigod who we can only pray won't blow up the world before he gets impeached.

While many Black folks have attacked the sanity of those of our hue who voted for Trump, I instead have reluctantly given a pass to the independent voters, those who did so for reasons that could eventually benefit our nation within a nation.

I'm not talking about intransigent, unquestioning Black Republicans, those who put their party before the people (even though they have a right to follow their own path).

Instead, I'm speaking of those brothers and sisters who were either tired of the status quo, making a political statement or setting into motion a slave revolt.

It wasn't as if they supported the Trumpster. In fact, two I've talked to over the last couple of weeks, stressed they detested him. But they nonetheless viewed him as a necessary evil.

One of the brothers used my support for Bernie Sanders to approximate his strategy.

When I first revealed my intent to support Sanders on an episode of Sunday Insight, everyone on the panel—liberal and conservative—burst into laughter. Their levity turned to consternation however, when I explained Sanders' platform was a marked departure from the Democratic Party rhetoric that has ill served its most loyal constituents. And more importantly (since I didn't think his platform would be enacted) a Sanders' presidency would blow up the party and politics as we know it, prompting (I would hope) a political revolution leading to the creation of a Black independent party.

I clarified my reasoning as a guest on Sherwin Hughes's radio show on WNOV a few weeks later, adding that my penultimate hope centered on my desire to see a disruption of the status quo that would lead to the creation of an exclusively Black political party. Or at the least, a Coffee Party to replicate what the Tea (He) Party has accomplished.

One of the callers that morning said he saw the television show and felt a sense of camaraderie because he voted for Trump for the same reason.

The two other brothers who contacted me made similar statements. Interestingly, they each reached the same conclusion without collusion. Feeling a sense of guilt, one of the brothers contacted me again last week. "I thought he (Trump) was wacky, but harmless; I didn't know he was crazy." The brother, whose name I won't reveal because he works for "local government" and the system would punish him for leaving what he called the "political plantation."

"We're (Black Americans) trapped in a (political) system that stagnates our growth. We buy into the misconception that they (Democrats) care about us, have our backs, but the reality is they are part of a system that hasn't changed since 1776 when we were 3/5ths of a man. We are the loyal, unquestioning pawns who give, but get little in return."

A deciding factor for the brother was the hacked Democratic Party e-mails, which he said were the most defining revelation to come out since it was discovered that Bill Clinton's crime legislation fueled the prison industrial complex.

"The media focused on the party's scheme to block Sanders, but I recall you saying on television that there were also racist emails that showed their (Dems) underlying agenda and prejudices. We are being used; we're pawns."

The fact that no Black leader—civil rights or politician—stood up to challenge the party about the revelations, spoke volumes, he said.

"And we need to be honest about the Obama years, about 'No Drama Obama,'" he continued. "I love him for the symbolism and dignity he brought to the office, but the truth is, he operated within a system that limited what he could do, and on top of that, refused to commit to remedies specifically for Black people."

"Democrats fought him in the first two years of his presidency. And his was the first presidency where Black America regressed. Poverty, unemployment and the gap between Black and White incomes got worse. Those are facts."

"But it's sacrilegious to bring that up. The reality is we aren't making progress under the current two-party system. That's why I voted to blow it up."

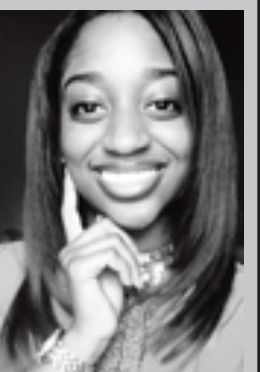

Under a Trump presidency, the brother believes the GOP will implode and the Dems will explode.

The brother is not alone in his thinking, and much of what he says, I've echoed in the past.

Voting for Trump however was a drastic step. It may spark a reevaluation of our political system, and allow us to see the Democratic Party for what it is. But that's assuming we don't fall prey and believe the expected criticism of Dems is a resolution in itself, and that Trump doesn't blow up the world before Black folks get their act together.

MILLENNIAL MAGIC

By Paishance Welch

What Do Millennials Really Want From Their Job?

In the workforce many people are either unsatisfied, distant, or simply uninterested in their work. Whether it be the location of their place of employment, their boss or overhead, or even just the job itself, it has been noted that millennials are the ones who job hop the most.

Millennials are most likely to look for and change jobs. According to a recent study from Gallup, a data driven news company based on U.S. world polls, daily tracking and public opinion research, millennials are the generation of change and satisfaction. When it comes to employment we demand the need to have a purpose, development, and most of all we want our jobs to represent our lives.

It is often asked "Are millennials really different?" It is very apparent and obvious that, yes, we are very different. We live for purpose, we read and learn not just to know things, but for understanding. We are building a horizon that is in depth and only hosts those that are in tune. According to Gallup, millennials have a lack of attachment to institutions and traditions. This lack of connection results in the frequent search for something new.

Millennials are more open to the world, and the ideas of it. We move in ways that produce meaningful endeavors. So, when it comes to occupation, it is not only the check that drives us. It is the mission and purpose of the organization in which we engage and interact with. Although money is the motive, it is not the only thing that drives us when we are searching for the right job.

As I mentioned before, millennials tend to learn in a different way. You will find that many individuals learn only to use it towards their objective, and only for that purpose. Millennials, on the other hand, learn and read for understanding. When companies hire us, to be instructed by a boss is simply not enough. We want to learn and grow. We want coaches. Having a relationship with a trusted adviser, or a mentor if you will, gives us hope, confidence and inspiration.

Last but not least, we value our jobs. We value the benefits and opportunities that may come with it, but most of all millennials value life. Our place of employment, the people we encounter on a daily basis and the impact that the job has, all contribute to the fundamentals of our life. A job is not just clocking in or dealing with customers, or answering to the CEO or boss. A job has now become a factor of our lives.

Millennials want to be physically and emotionally tied to their job. In addition to that, we want to live a purposeful and meaningful life. Millennials struggle to find good jobs that engage them.

Anti-Muslim hate has gone mainstream in Europe

By Mahmud el-Shafey

LONDON — Describing itself as the “most authoritative and comprehensive exploration of extremism” in Britain and Europe, the annual report by the British-based advocacy group Hope not Hate paints a bleak picture for the post Brexit and Trump world.

“2016 was a year where a new far-right threat became more evident, one played out largely on social media and to an international audience,” Hope not Hate Chief Executive Officer Nick Lowles said in the report.

“It is this same new-style far right that has been at the heart of the global fake news phenomenon and that can engage and mobilise greater numbers of people across Europe and North America than ever before,” he added.

The report points to the emergence of a new generation of far-right activists across Europe who are active on the internet and social media in an unprecedented way. This is a generation of far-right political activists who, for the first time, is witnessing some of their own views seeping into the mainstream, particularly fears regarding a clash of civilisations between the Judeo-Christian West and Islam.

“Trump’s election was a catalyst for the international anti-Muslim movement. After many years of slowly and painstakingly edging their way out of the political wilderness, the ‘counter-jihadists’ suddenly have an apparent advocate in the White House who echoes some of their positions on Islam and Muslims,” said Joe Mulhall, co-author of the report.

While there has been clear political fallout from US President Donald Trump’s election in Britain and elsewhere in Europe, traditional far-right activists have generally remained “marginal and controversial,” although their “core ideas” have moved into the mainstream, Mulhall said.

“Often conspiratorial anti-Muslim views are adopted by supposedly mainstream politicians and media outlets,” he added.

The 75-page report includes detailed sections looking at political groups such as Britain First and the British National Party, defence leagues, groups that specialised in counter-jihadism as well as the alt-right and even major parties such as the UK Independence Party (UKIP) and the ruling Conservatives.

“In the last decade, talk of a Muslim invasion and a threat to Western civilisation has moved from social media and the blogosphere to media-grabbing street demonstrations and into the parliamentary chambers of Europe,” Mulhall said.

“This mainstreaming process has rapidly accelerated over the last few years as a result of the refugee crisis and the spate of terrorist attacks that has shaken the continent.”

A 2016 report by the Pew Research Center in the United States showed that unfavourable views about Muslims had surged in a number of European countries, including Hungary (72%), Italy (69%) and Poland (66%). Even Germany and the Netherlands, which had traditionally been more open towards immigrants, had seen a hardening of right-wing views.

“While this is all likely to encourage anti-Muslim attitudes in society it is also likely to create resentment and a backlash among Muslims who will understandably feel persecuted and targeted,” Mulhall said.

In the wake of the report, British Muslim activists seemed less likely to come together to figure out ways to address rising anti-Muslim sentiment than to become bogged down in their own internal issues, as indicated by an article in the report focusing on Muslim extremism by British human rights activist Sara Khan.

Khan’s article cited a number of British Muslim groups and figures, including Hizb ut-Tahrir, MEND (Muslim Engagement and Development), CAGE and others for promoting “Salafi-Islamist” propaganda.

“Government-backed Sara Khan and her ‘We Will Inspire’ organisation are at the forefront of promoting the government’s controversial Prevent counter-terror strategy, which all the major mainstream Muslim organisations have condemned as a massive monitoring, spying and profiling exercise on the Muslim community,” said an article on popular British Muslim news website 5pillars. Khan’s report had described 5pillars as a “propaganda” news site.

The London-based advocacy organisation CAGE, which was criticised in the report for ties to Salafist-Islamists, also criticised Khan’s analysis.

“Khan’s article... is a government-sponsored smear directed at dissenting Muslim individuals and organisations. The tactics to smear by association cheaply disguises the reality of how CAGE operates. CAGE has always defended principles, regardless of people, in accordance with the rule of law,” a CAGE statement said.

At a time when right-wing views, particularly anti-Muslim sentiment, are gaining traction in the mainstream, many observers are calling for British Muslims to put aside their differences to confront this new threat.

Mahmud el-Shafey is an Arab Weekly correspondent in London.

“Trump’s election was a catalyst for the international anti-Muslim movement. After many years of slowly and painstakingly edging their way out of the political wilderness, the ‘counter-jihadists’ suddenly have an apparent advocate in the White House who echoes some of their positions on Islam and Muslims...”

-- Joe Mulhall, co-author of the report.

Muhammad Ali’s son launching religious freedom campaign

By Errin Haines Whack, Associated Press I
 Posted March 8

Muhammad Ali’s son and ex-wife declared a “showdown” over religious freedom against President Donald Trump a month after they were detained by immigration officials in a Florida airport.

Muhammad Ali Jr. and his mother, Khalilah Camacho Ali, are headed to Washington Thursday to meet with lawmakers to discuss the issue and their experience.

They are also calling for an end to Trump’s travel ban and are launching a “Step Into the Ring” campaign, drawing on support of former boxing greats including Evander Holyfield, Larry Holmes and Roberto Duran. They are framing the effort directly as a fight against the president, using the hashtag #AlivsTrump.

Trump has shown admiration for Ali in the past, calling Ali a “truly great champion” when the boxer died of Parkinson’s disease in June. Trump also singled out an Ali exhibit during a recent visit to the National Museum of African-American History and Culture in Washington.

The Alis were invited by Democrats to a forum organized by members of the House subcommittee on border security. The Alis will address lawmakers and push to testify at a formal hearing.

“There shouldn’t be a travel ban,” said Khalilah Camacho Ali. “If I don’t speak up now, they’re going to keep harassing us.”

The mother and son, both born in the United States, were returning from a Black History Month event in Jamaica on Feb. 7 when they were detained and questioned at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport. They said they were asked if they were Muslim and explained their relationship to the former heavyweight champion repeatedly.

“I’m paranoid. I’m just waiting for somebody to mess with me. That’s not a good feeling when you have to travel,” Khalilah Camacho Ali said when asked how the incident has affected her.

NAAGS Offers Hope for Single, Christian, Black Women

Christian black women have a less than 10% chance of marrying a Christian Black man

ORLANDO, Fla./Christian News-wire/ -- Charles Cooper, a forty-year veteran of Christian ministry launches National Association for the Advancement of Godly Sisters (NAAGS) to make husbands. Since the Bible forbids Christians to marry anyone that is not a Christian, black Christian women suffer disproportionately because of this edict.

Eligible black Christian men are fewer and fewer in number. Out of 10 randomly picked black men, at most, only one will be a Christian.

Of the 10, one will die before his

Muhammad Ali, Jr.

18th birthday, one will marry another ethnic group, one is in prison, one is gay, one is an addict, one is a momma’s boy, two are unbelievers, and the final one is religious, but not Christian.

NAAGS seeks to win black men to Jesus Christ and disciple them, thereby increasing the pool of possible choices for single Christian black women. David Murrow states, and Edward Thompson and Jawanza Kunjufu confirm, “That 75 to 90 percent of the adults in the typical African-American congregation are women.”

This shortage of men is causing many black Christian women to either live their adult lives alone, compromised in their commitment to Christ, or marrying another ethnic group.

NAAGS works with local churches to train women in aggressive evangelism. For more information visit: www.naags.org.

Ali's son launching religious freedom campaign

The experience left them convinced that they were targeted because they are Muslim and have Arabic names. Khalilah Camacho Ali, who was born and raised Muslim, said she has always fought for religious rights, and pushed her former husband to use his fame to do the same.

"We, as a family, have been fighting this for a very long time," she said. "We are going to continue to fight for religious justice."

A spokesman for U.S. Customs and Border Protection has said Ali Jr. was held for questioning, but not because of his name or religion.

Trump signed his first travel ban a week into his presidency. The executive order sparked confusion across the country, causing chaotic scenes at airports and prompting lawsuits.

This week, he announced a revised version that bars new visas for people from six Muslim-majority countries and temporarily shuts down America's refugee program.

It also removes Iraq from the list of banned countries and removes language prioritizing religious minorities that some viewed as a way to help Christians get into the United States while excluding Muslims.

The new order is set to take effect on March 16.

Muhammad Ali, a three-time heavyweight boxing champion, also fought for civil rights. He refused to enter the military draft during the Vietnam War as a conscientious objector after converting to Islam. The decision cost him his heavyweight title and he was convicted of draft evasion.

The U.S. Supreme Court later ruled in his favor.

As for the former, there is a growing consensus that Democrats will do nothing but complain and cry wolf, as was the case with state Democrats since Republicans gained control with the election of Scott Walker. "All we have to do is complain," a Black Democrat said at the time, "and our constituents will think we're doing something."

Talk show host Karen Hunter was equally bombastic in her criticism of Black Democrat congressmen on her satellite show recently.

She said they are more interested in appeasing other special interests and maintaining the plantation than in advancing the Black agenda.

That's one of the reasons Hunter has created a new political entity, the Party of Lincoln, which she believes will at the very least balance the political scales.

Hunter says it is ridiculous to put all your interests into one political party basket, because history shows that entity will take you for granted.

Empowerment comes from strategically leveling the playing field. Thus Hunter's plan is to train Black candidates to run as Republicans so we would have someone on the inside of the GOP to advance elements of our agenda.

I can see the merit in that agenda, but I have not waived from my belief that we need an independent Black political party.

Artist rendering of one of the renovated areas of the Mary Ryan Boys&Girls Club in Sherman Park.

Reopening ceremony held at the Mary Ryan Boys&Girls Club in Sherman Park

Community leaders hosted Wednesday a reopening ceremony at the Mary Ryan Boys & Girls Club in Sherman Park, which has been closed to the public for renovations since the end of August 2016.

The 25-year-old building was due for major upgrades and updates. In order to accomplish this work and keep the public safe during construction, the county and Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater Milwaukee agreed that the Club would close after summer programming concluded.

Some of the current Club members' parents who used the facility when they were children haven't seen these types of improvements to the Club, until

The major renovations apply to every room in the large, 57,000 square-foot building and required 418 gallons of paint, 3,590 square-feet of carpet, 13,460 square feet of rubber flooring, more than 200 pieces of new furniture and more than 1,200 new light bulbs were installed.

The Club contains several spaces designed specifically for the different age groups it serves, with programming tailored to their development: 5-6 year olds ("mini-pals"), 7-8 year olds ("pals"), 9-12 year olds (pre-teens, or "cadets"), and 13-18 year olds ("teens").

These renovations have been made possible through the generous financial and in-kind contributions of Milwaukee County, Lowe's Companies, Boys & Girls Clubs of America, Northwestern Mutual,

Moore said in a statement the Republican plan not only destroys the progress achieved during President Obama's tenure, it also manufactures new health care crises that will have a devastating impact on seniors, women, and working

The congresswoman stressed low-income Americans aren't the only ones who will bear the financial brunt of such corrosive legislation.

"It is important to recognize that everyone--regardless of their socioeconomic background--will foot the bill for this misguided proposal."

Moore is particularly disturbed by the effect the legislation will have on women's health. In addition to defunding Planned Parenthood--a vital health care organization that many of her constituents depend on--the bill also aims to dismantle the private insurance market for abortion coverage, a procedure that, out of pocket, can cost tens of thousands of dollars.

"As this legislation moves through the House of Representatives, rest assured I will be voicing my strident opposition to it and any proposal that values politics over patients."

Y&E YOUTH & EDUCATION

Over 300 MPS students watch inspiring historical movie, “Hidden Figures”

Three hundred and fifty students recently attended a private screening at a local Marcus Theater of the hit movie, “Hidden Figures,” the story of Black women who made contributions that helped put a man in space and back to earth while overcoming racism and Jim Crow. The screening was sponsored by Aurora Healthcare. Six schools participated: St. Joan Antida, Christ the King, James Madison Academic Campus, North Division high school, South Division high school, and Hamilton high school. After the movie, representatives of Aurora Healthcare and the schools in attendance participated in a panel discussion in which they talked about the role of women and minorities in science, technology, engineering and math. The panel was moderated by Vivian King of Aurora. --Photos by Yvonne Kemp

Prism Technical, MPS and other STEM related companies hold screening of “Hidden Figures” to celebrate Girl Day 2017

Two hundred female MPS students recently saw a private viewing of the movie 'Hidden Figures' followed by a hands-on rocket launching activity in celebration of the fifth annual Girl Day...Every Girl is a Rockstar, at the Marcus Magestic Cinema, 770 N. Springdale Rd., in Waukesha.

Prism Technical & Grandesco Solutions along with sponsors' Greater Milwaukee Foundation, Milwaukee Public Schools, American Transmission Co., Mortenson Construction, JF Ahern, We Energies & HNTB hosted Girl Day to motivate and inspire 5th-8th grade female students to pursue STEM related careers.

The goal of Girl Day is to introduce the female students who might otherwise never consider a construction trade or STEM related career path to excel in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM). --Photo by Yvonne Kemp

Free ACT Wings preparation classes for high school students offered by SDC

Important ACT preparation and supplies provided by SDC to Milwaukee County High School Students

Taking the ACT is something many high school students find daunting. Preparing for the exam is often a costly expense students and their families cannot afford. ACT results are heavily weighed by higher education institutions during the admission process. The Social Development Commission's (SDC) Youth Services division will provide FREE ACT preparation and supplies to high school students, grades 9 -12, that reside in Milwaukee County.

The ACT Wings preparation workshops consist of two half-day sessions. Students are required to attend both Saturday sessions – March 11 and March 25 from 9:00 AM – 3:00 PM.

Participants will not only benefit from free instruction, but will complete practice exercises in all five test areas (English, mathematics, reading, science and writing), an ACT preparation book, Personal Study Plan guidance, strategies and tips for success. Individual follow-up will also be provided for participants.

The no cost workshops will be held at the Social Development Commission, 1730 West North Avenue, Milwaukee.

Online registration is encouraged at www.cr-sdc.org under the Education & Training section of the Programs page. Interested parents and student may also contact Willie Mae Hill at whill@cr-sdc.org or 414.906.2790.

Funding for the ACT Wings Workshops is provided by the Youth Services division of the City of Milwaukee.

For more than 50 years, the Social Development Commission has operated as the Community Action Agency for Milwaukee County. SDC serves as a planner, coordinator, and provider of human service programs for low income individuals and families residing in Milwaukee County. The agency is an intergovernmental commission and is governed by a board of 18 citizens from Milwaukee County, each of whom hold the title of “Commissioner.” For more information on SDC's programs and services, visit cr-sdc.org. Rufus King celebrates undefeated Lady Generals as team heads to semifinals in state basketball tournament

Fellow athletes also recognized for their accomplishments at pep rally

Rufus King International High School celebrated Thursday the success of its girls' basketball team by holding a sendoff pep rally for the team before it heads to the semifinal game in the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association's Division 1 girls' championship. The pep rally was held at the school, located at 1801 W. Olive St.

The team also recognized the Rufus King Cheerleaders, who won their second state championship in a row, and wrestler Liam Arnold, who participated in the state tournament. The undefeated Lady Generals will play undefeated Appleton North on Friday, March 10 at 6:35 p.m. in Green Bay at the Resch Center. If the team advances, it will play for the WIAA Division 1 championship on Saturday, March 11 at 8:15 p.m. --Photo courtesy of MPS

Senator Lena Taylor Kept it Local for Read Across America

Students from Capitol West Academy, a public charter school on Milwaukee's northwest side, celebrated Dr. Seuss's birthday with a Read Across America celebration today.

Honored guest and keynote speaker, Senator Lena Taylor, was on hand to read to 4th graders and address the entire school about the importance of reading. CWA was especially honored to welcome Senator Taylor, a lifelong Milwaukeean who still serves her childhood neighborhood today. She is the District 4 Wisconsin State Senator.

Senator Taylor began by reading a classic Seuss title, "Are you my mother?" followed by "Growing Table," a book about fellow Milwaukeean and fresh-food advocate, Will Allen.

Cast and Creators of WGN's Underground Urge #JusticeReform-NOW in New PSAs

Stars Urge Congress to Tackle Mass Incarceration

WASHINGTON -- Today, The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, the ACLU, and #cut50 released new PSAs featuring the cast and creators of the WGN TV show Underground calling on Congress to tackle mass incarceration by ending the racially discriminatory War on Drugs. Participating cast and creators include Jurnee Smollett-Bell, Amirah Vann, Alano Miller, Aldis Hodge, Misha Green, and Joe Pokaski.

Last year, 100+ celebrities and dozens of civil rights, criminal justice, and faith organizations joined the campaign for #JusticeReform-NOW, urging Congress to pass historic, bipartisan federal legislation that would begin to fix the U.S. criminal justice system.

"More Black men are in prison or jail and on probation or parole than were enslaved in 1850, before the Civil War began," said Van Jones, co-founder of #cut50.

"Millions of Americans, primarily black and Latino men, are being sentenced to years upon years in prison for low-level crimes.

"Their communities are robbed of their talents and potential, all while we spend billions on punishment instead of rehabilitation. We have to end this injustice, and that starts with Congress."

"It is clear that our criminal justice system is broken and in dire need of reform," said Wade Henderson, president and CEO of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights. "Our federal prisons are over-

During her reading of "Growing Table," Senator Taylor handed out some very unusual visual aids: a potato, zucchini, sweet potato, a head of cabbage and other fresh produce for the students to see and feel. They spent a couple of minutes talking about some of their favorite foods and with whom they like to share meals. Many of the students agreed that Grandma's house for a holiday dinner is an absolute favorite.

To top off the reading of the book, Senator Taylor had sprouts for the 4th graders to sample.

Senator Taylor was joined by more than 20 other Milwaukee professionals who volunteered their time this morning to read to CWA from some of their favorite children's books.

Capitol West Academy, located at 88th and Capitol, is a tuition-free public school for grades K4-8th grade. It provides a safe, nurturing, educational environment where children, with the support of their families and community, learn and grow to be successful lifelong learners and productive citizens. CWA is a charter school of UWM and its rigorous academics and curriculum focused on character development has earned it recognition as a National School of Character.

crowded with a population that is disproportionately Black and Latino, and not because they commit crimes at a higher rate.

They are all too often the end result of a flawed system where mandatory minimum sentencing laws distort a just outcome. It is the certainty of a sentence, not the length, that serves as a deterrent, and those sentences must be both fair and just. Wasting resources simply to keep people locked up does not enhance public safety, nor is it a wise use of the taxpayer's money. During the last Congress, there was a sincere bipartisan effort to correct this egregious problem. We urge the current Congress to act now."

"Our country has become addicted to incarceration, sending millions of people into our jails and prisons who in many cases don't belong there," said Jesselyn McCurdy, deputy director of the ACLU's Washington Legislative Office.

"Communities of color are especially burdened by our dependence on incarceration. Due to the failed War on Drugs and a misplaced trust in the so-called 'tough on crime' approach, we have inflated our sentencing laws to draconian levels, wasting lives and resources. We need less incarceration and more pragmatic strategies focused on prevention and rehabilitation."

"All Americans should be deeply concerned about the ways the current criminal justice system disproportionately affects people of color. Disparities span every step in the criminal justice system, from policing to prison.

Nearly three quarters of federal drug offenders sentenced under mandatory minimums were Black or Hispanic and more than 60% of incarcerated people nationwide are racial minorities," said Jessica Jackson, National Director of #cut50. "But the failure of this system extends beyond prison walls. Incarceration affects employment, housing, voting, and educational opportunities.

BEFORE THE
 STATE OF WISCONSIN
 NOTICE OF RECEIPT OF A FEASIBILITY AND PLAN OF OPERATION REPORT
 BADGER DISPOSAL OF WL, INC.
 MILWAUKEE, WI
 EPA ID#: WID988580056

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to section NR 670.432(2), Wisconsin Administrative Code, that the Department of Natural Resources (Department), on August 9, 2016, received a Feasibility and Plan of Operation Report (FPOR) submitted by Badger Disposal of WL, Inc. (Badger) as part of the process of re-licensing their facility as a hazardous waste storage and treatment and facility. Badger is located at 5611 W. Hemlock St, within the City of Milwaukee, Milwaukee County, Wisconsin.
 The purpose of the review of the FPOR is to determine whether the facility is still feasible for use as a hazardous waste container storage and treatment facility and to establish any site specific conditions which must be included for proper operation of this hazardous waste facility. Badger's hazardous waste operations are proposed as follows:

1. Maximum hazardous waste storage in containers (including portable tankers/trucks) inside of all designated buildings: 131,395 gallons.
2. Maximum hazardous waste storage on a roll-off/lugger pad: 6 each 20-cubic yard containers.
3. Hazardous waste treatment (fuels blending) within a 6,000 (or less) gallon portable tanker/truck.

The FPOR does not propose an increase in storage or treatment capacity. The Department is currently reviewing the FPOR for completeness and will provide additional notice when the Department has completed that review and developed a Preliminary Determination.

This notice is for the purpose of providing the public with information regarding the contact persons for information regarding Badger and the locations for reviewing documents. Interested parties can direct information, opinions, requests to be on or removed from the facility mailing list, and inquiries throughout the application process to:

It is recommended, but not required, that you have attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 45 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition and you may lose your right to object anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

You are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of 948.31, Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment.

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under 767.511(1m), Wis. Stats., are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in 767.105, Wis. Stats.

767.105 Information from Circuit Court Commissioner.
 (2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order under sec. 767.59 or 767.451:
 (a) The Circuit Court Commissioner

shall, with or without charge provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:

1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.
 2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.
 3. Community resources and family court counseling services available to assist the parties.
 4. The procedure for setting modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.
- (b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase with a copy of the statutory provisions in this chapter generally pertinent to the action.
