NEWS AND VIEWS FOR OUR BLACK KINGS

Real Love – For Black Men

By Torre M.
Johnson
Sr.

We, as Black men, must learn to celebrate ourselves by celebrating each other's mission's. We should combine our hopes and goals so that all will support each brother.

We, as Black men, must be again taught the importance of community, the building process as a team and that being competitive without successful achievements is ridiculous. We must also be taught again that being only referred to as a king without royal duties means nothing.

We, as Black men, need to sit aside our selfish egos so that our families can each grow.

We must stop pretending we as one can do it all.

We must stop ignoring the real causes of our pains and work towards eliminating the blame game.

We as Black men must stand up and get in place. We have to recognize we are falling behind as others continue to climb. We must celebrate life at a level higher than death. We must promote the need to constantly learn by continuously educating ourselves.

We as Black men are supposed to be the first protector of the Black woman and child, so I wonder why we do not become upset and rally in large crowds when a brother kills a brother.

Why, do we as black men, do nothing to ensure that it stops?

We as Black men must stop sitting on the bottom having the conversation as if we were on top. We must shake our self-curse and allow action to work. Most of us have love and respect for each other. I search daily for better.

Then we have some hanging on to community positions, doing nothing but eating. They are ignoring the statistics and the lack of long term accomplishments. They are ignoring those many brothers that are still receiving those long prison sentences.

We as Black men must do something now, for tomorrow waits on no one.

When tomorrow arrives, sorrow will not be excused for failure.

Today is the day we must overcome the key to our success REAL LOVE...

WHAT'S UP WITH THE BROTHAS

Local • National • International

“We found that men with darker skin and more stereotypically Black facial features tended to be most likely to elicit biased size perceptions, even though they were actually no larger than men with lighter skin and less stereotypical facial features...”

-- lead author John Paul Wilson, PhD, of Montclair State University.

STUDY: Black Men Perceived As Physically More Dangerous

Researchers say perceptions of Black men make racial profiling more likely

Despite Black and White men being the same weight and height, people perceive African-Americans as physically more dangerous, a new study finds.

According to the report, Black men are viewed as taller, more muscular and heavier.

The study was published in the American Psychological Association's Journal of Personality and Social Psychology (APA).

It found that participants who were not African-American believed Black men were more capable of physical harm than White men despite being the same size.

“Black men tend to be stereotyped as threatening and, as a result, may be disproportionately targeted by police even when unarmed,” a synopsis of the study reads.

“Here, we found evidence that biased perceptions of young Black men's physical size may play a role in this process.”

In a statement published to the APA's website, even Black participants displayed this bias. The difference was that they did not find Black men to be more harmful or deserving of force.

“We found that men with darker skin and more stereotypically Black facial features tended to be most likely to elicit biased size perceptions, even though they were actually no larger than men with lighter skin and less stereotypical facial features,” said lead author John Paul Wilson, PhD, of Montclair State University.

“Thus, the size bias doesn't rely just on a White versus Black group boundary. It also varies within Black men according to their facial features.”

Researchers noted that in the wake of today's tension between police and people of color, the physical size of those killed becomes pushed to the forefront.

“Unarmed Black men are disproportionately more likely to be shot and killed by police, and often these killings are accompanied by explanations that cite the physical size of the person shot,” Wilson said. “Our research suggests that these descriptions may reflect stereotypes of black males that do not seem to comport with reality.”--Article courtesy of ebony.com

FTB Opinion

An ode to the Black man

Society fails to take the time to address black men as more than just a group but multiple individuals. There are more different shades of brown than I can count and as many different men who wear those shades.

There is not just one black man. However, a singular, stereotypical bad reputation seems to follow them all.

Black men are either too much or never enough. Society sees black men as dysfunctional, violent, hypersexual and uneducated. These outdated stereotypes neglect the depth of the lives of American black men, who have many roles—fathers, husbands, mentors and community activists.

Of course, we must not gloss over the fact that far too many black men continue to come into contact with the criminal justice system.

Of black men born, one in three have a chance of being incarcerated during their lifetime.

The Twitter hashtag #IfTheyGunnedMeDown demonstrates how the narrative the media continues to use to portray black people isn't always truthful—depicting blacks as violent thugs with gang and drug affiliations.

A picture of Johnny from high school wearing baggy clothes and a gold grill is more preferred than to showcase him graduating from a university in his cap and gown, even though the number of black men in college nearly doubles the number of those in jail.

There is nothing more appealing yet intimidating about an educated black man in America.

Yet, through the grand injustices, there is some hope.

Great improvements in the black community from education, employment and socioeconomic status have been made.

Many of these achievements are supported by progressive policies such as My Brother's Keeper, an initiative by President Obama that specializes in supporting and building African-American men for a brighter future.

From a black woman to a black man, we appreciate you. Understand we may feel we do not need you; however, we still want you.

Too many times people have forgotten that in a place filled with living, we tend to focus on the one who is dead. So many black men are alive with hope that is choked by a world which sees them as a potential burden instead of budding brilliance.

We see your potential and know the obstacles placed in your path are unfair and sometimes impossible to beat. Your strength inspires and encourages both women and youth to remain strong.

We will stand by you in your fight with white America and respect your voice when society refuses to acknowledge you.

If black queens do not uplift their black kings, who else will? It's time for the media to report the true, updated story.

By Alysha Hurst, article courtesy of "The University Star," a publication from Texas State University

No longer can a nation full of prejudice and racism cause black men to become discouraged. It is time for appreciation, admiration and respect.

There is no better way to embrace this time than to appreciate the hands we stand on: our black men.

OPEN LETTER TO OUR READERS

Milwaukee Community Journal is an actual brick and mortar building, not just an online entity. I was downstairs reviewing our equipment in the storage office and it's like visiting a museum. Old relics, equipment, computers, software and past editions illuminate 40 years journaling the history of change.

Since our origin in 1976, we've moved with our audience. Today our readers are predominantly millennials, 18-40 years of age, shakers and movers, the buyers! They are buying homes, cars, raising families. They are eating "fresh," active in politics, exercising and partying.

Our readers find us in print, with our twice-weekly editions in tenured retail outlets, churches and selective distribution spots. But they also read us online at

The Weekend Edition/For The Brothers June 30, 2017 Page 7 milwaukeecommunityjournal.com We're in this to win this!

We're dynamic....crisp clear....interactive...and to be honest - exploding with information that you want to read!

We're perfect for new and established advertisers! We want more local interaction and community written articles. We want to offer more millennial access to a proven community source.

This is who we are. But one thing is still deep on our hearts, and that is you've got to join our team. You're the community part of the Milwaukee Community Journal. Let's build together!
