UNCF holds annual 2017 Walk/Run for Education along Milwaukee's lakefront

Walkers and dedicated runners recently took part in the annual United Negro College Fund Walk/Run for Education. As you can see by this photo, the participation was great despite the threat of rain. The walk/run is a fundraising event for UNCF students in the form of scholarships and services. UNCF students attend over 900 colleges and universities. UNCF also supports 37 historically Black colleges and universities. But the fun didn't end at the finish line at Veterans Park. Participants enjoyed food, entertainment and information provided by a mini health fair. Look for more photos of the walk/run in this week's Weekend Edition --Photos by Yvonne Kemp

Representatives of various corporations, community based organizations, fraternities and sororities hold plaques given to them by UNCF Executive Director Julietta Henry (center) for their sponsorship of the event.

$41,000 going to Dr. Terence N. Thomas Scholarship recipients August 6

By Patricia O'Flynn Pattillo, MCJ publisher
Over the years, the Dr. Thomas Scholarship Fund has led in identifying superb students from Milwaukee and the neighboring suburbs who excel and need scholarship support to further their academic aspirations.

Speech, of Arrested Development and brother of Dr. Thomas, pledged $25,000 to the funds and until they were moved to Cream City Medical Association, they were awarded to a number of current physicians in the city. As requests for scholarship support grew from youngsters in the Milwaukee Community Journal readership community, the Dr. Thomas Fund was incorporated in 1996, as a 501c3 non-profit entity in the State of Wisconsin. To date, over 80 brilliant students have been the beneficiaries of the money, raised through donations, sponsors and post-graduate stipends through the Ernestine O'Bee bequest of one-quarter of a million dollars for children who are proven successes in academia. Nearly $ 900,000 has been awarded to students from their freshman year through their graduation from college. The fund is a must seek for medical professionals. Two physicians have graduated already, with another three in the pipeline with graduations in 2018. Two nurses completed training and a third is in her second year of study. Two pharmacists graduated, and another graduates next year while one continues with advanced certification that will be completed in 2018. "We have

Forty-first Annual Dr. Terence N. Thomas Scholarship Brunch honors "Millennials+"

On Sunday, August 6, at 12 Noon, the Milwaukee Community Journal will host its 41st Annual Dr. Terence N. Thomas Scholarship Brunch at the Italian Conference Center, located at 631 E Chicago Street.

This year's theme is "MILLENNIAL MAGIC: MODELING AND MOLDING A NEW MILWAUKEE."

For 41 years, The Milwaukee Community Journal has been at the forefront of Milwaukee's inner city history, its challenges, its achievements, its visions and it dreams. Throughout, the newspaper has highlighted many people, companies, civic/social and Greek organizations that worked to build a stronger Milwaukee.

The newspaper's overarching desire is to accentuate Milwaukee's positives, while working to eliminate the negatives.

"We are proud to honor some of the movers and shakers who are making Milwaukee a Mecca for millennials and others," said MCJ Publisher Patricia O'Flynn Pattillo. "The individuals we are recognizing are native Milwaukeeans who were raised here, educated here, and have chosen to stay here to utilize their gifts and talents in our community."

"Milwaukee desires to become increasingly aware of the presence, talents, influence and impact these millennials+ have on our community and celebrate them."

Pattillo states the group of individuals overwhelming spends money, de-

Public relations exec whose agency worked as a communications liaison between Ferguson government officials and community after Michael Brown shooting by cop says transparency key to establishing trust
By Thomas E. Mitchell, Jr.

In less than a month, two families will celebrate the lives and tragic deaths of loved ones at the hands of police that took place three years and four days apart.

On August 9, the family of Michael Brown, activists and residents of Ferguson, Missouri will celebrate and remember Brown's life and tragic death at the hands of White Ferguson police officer Darren Wilson in 2014.

Here in Milwaukee on August 13, the family of Sylville Smith will hold a memorial with local activists and residents, reflecting on their loved ones shooting death a year ago at the hands of former MPD officer Dominique Heaggan-Brown, who is Black (and recently found not guilty in the shooting termine trends, influences our elected officials and the corporate mode of operations (MO) today, and they will be even more significant in the future.

"They represent Milwaukee's 'Middle America'—those who are the most technologically savvy, the most energized, and the most demonstrative generation today. They are our present and we want to shout it to the rooftops! Milwaukee must embrace this synergy that will thrust us all to become our best selves," Pattillo said.

The MCJ publisher created the annual scholarship brunch in honor of her deceased and beloved son, Dr. Terence N. Thomas. Proceeds from the event help fund the memorial scholarship established in his memory in 1996. To date, the newspaper has used those funds to award almost $800,000 in academic stipends to students who retain a 3.0 cumulative grade average or better.

A new field of aspirants are pursuing degrees in international languages, international business affairs, sports medicine and engineering. As the funds have continued to grow in significance and visibility so has the scholarship applicants and they do not disappoint. When you hear again a negative story about Milwaukee schools, retrieve this article and flaunt it, for we are producing spectacular students. Students who defy every stereotype.

However, examine what these students have. They are grounded, supported, expected to succeed and applauded. They are exposed and nurtured and able to focus instead of grappling for finances and questions of how they will be able to meet the demands. Ninety eight percent of Dr. Thomas scholars graduate and 85% continue on with post graduate studies. You make this possible through your support of the Brunch each year. Every ticket helps a student...every sponsor commits to make this trajectory of excellence a living reality. Every parent pledges to "SEED SUCCESS". As an academic success engine, each plays their part...parent, student, community.

Requisites for the fund include a documented 3.0 g/p/a or better, recommendations from three professionals, and they complete an essay: "I Know It Takes A Whole Village" because: The students selected pledge to use the funds for their stated purpose and they agree to pay forward when they complete their academic pursuits. These requisites have been the pre-cursor for excellence demonstrated in cumulative averages, each semester, and a maturity that is witnessed as they continue through the four years of undergraduate study.

Most important is the student's exposure to the stories of amazing Honorees who are a part of the Anniversary Brunch attendees. Opportunities to network with other students with like-dedication to study, community and anticipated futures are auxiliary benefits.

A by-product of the fund has been an alumni group of dynamic future leaders, community-thought aspirants and a pool of like-minded friends, sweethearts, as was the case of our Keynote speakers, Reverend and Mrs. Justin Lester, who met at the scholarship brunch and are now a family, with the birth of their son, Camden, this May.

One of our scholars who has taken maternity leave, with the birth of her daughter, this May, shared some poignant thoughts. She married her high school sweetheart, yet she has maintained a 3.9 g/p/a throughout and she stated: "I am grateful for the scholarship stipend, it has helped me finance my education at University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in Special Education. I will make a superb teacher for I have learned patience and perseverance and holding on to a dream and a vision of my family. But what I appreciate most has been meeting community leaders, reading their stories of wisdom and perseverance and still keeping focus."

Continuing, she said, "The Dr. Thomas Fund taught me that I can do whatever I want to do and the only limitation I experience is the limits I set myself or permit others to set for me.

The Dr. Thomas experience has been opportunity meeting personal potential. That exposure is greater than money. This confirmation of my ability and the example of others has been my opportunity for excellence, beyond the dollars", I am grateful."

Visit the Dr.TNT Fund.org to see the video of Alethia Tilford who traveled to the Dominican Republic, this year. And learn of the special award given to Dr. Brittany Mays, before her graduation from Medical College of Wisconsin, in May. Or see how Patricia Walker followed in the footsteps of our cousin, Caroline Walker, and pursued pharmacy and now completes her accreditation, this fall, at the University of Kentucky. These are investments of seven, eight and nine years...but it is worth it.

Superb male Dr. Thomas scholars have included Kendall Keith and Aaron Wilder who are now associated with MKE Fellowship and have interned in Milwaukee corporations, through the partnership the Community Journal has with the Fellowship Open.

Our scholars are gainfully employed in corporations like GE, Manpower, University of Whitewater, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, the City of Milwaukee and numerous social service agencies. Equally significant are the organizations they have aligned themselves with such as the Milwaukee Urban League, Holy Redeemer COGIC, New Covenant, Marquette University.

Both shootings led to violent protests and destruction of property and attracted the attention of the nation and the world.

City officials and law enforcement in the majority Black St. Louis suburb of 21,000 and in Wisconsin's largest city will also be reflecting on what they did...and didn't do following the fatal shootings which, in the case of Ferguson, sparked protests across the country against police brutality and forced changes in police practices. It also gave rise to the question: do Black lives matter?

A Black St. Louis public relations executive who spent two years in Ferguson playing a major role in addressing the issues and healing wounds after the Brown shooting said the best way for city government and police to confront such crises is immediate and total transparency: sharing all uncensored or unfiltered information about the incident and what is occurring and will occur—as it relates to an investigation—with the citizens and the media.

"(The) Main goal and focus was to be transparent," said Johnny Little, a public relations and strategic communications counselor and owner of eLittle Communications Group.

In an exclusive MCJ interview, Little felt his agency's job was to make Ferguson government and law enforcement officials "transparent": making visible what they were doing to investigate the shooting and ease tensions in the community, and making accessible all information to the media outlets that descended on the town. "That's what we emphasized (transparency). Why? Because the whole world was looking at Ferguson."

Little was in Milwaukee recently to speak about his experiences in Ferguson and how public relation firms can help government, law enforcement and communities build trust at a luncheon before members of the Public Relations Society of America (PRSA) Southeastern Wisconsin Chapter, a professional development organization for public relations practitioners in the Milwaukee area.

Little, whose firm was hired to assist Ferguson in its public relations effort following the Brown shooting, said his agency worked as a liaison between government, the community and media. The city had no office of communication or individual to handle PR at the time of the incident.

A former television news executive producer and director of communications for the St. Louis school district, Little noted Ferguson government officials were criticized for not being transparent with the community, nor responding to the media in a timely fashion with details of the investigation. "Our focus (as an agency) was not to shape the narrative, but to communicate and have transparency with accountability."

Little believes there is a place for public relations firms in crisis situations like Ferguson or Milwaukee to help calm tense and racially charged situations.

"We (public relation firms) are experts in our field. When you're sick, you don't ask a baker to prescribe you medicine. When in a crisis, you go to pros who know how to communicate.

"We're able to make a difference mainly in dealing with media. Ferguson got between 250 and 300 media inquires, and not all of them local, but also national and international, even from Africa. People from around the world were flying into St. Louis and visiting Ferguson. Public relations makes a difference."

As a former television news producer who worked under the pressure of

"Little felt his agency's job was to make Ferguson government and law enforcement officials 'transparent.' 'That's what we emphasized. Why? Because the whole world was looking at Ferguson.'" deadlines, Little understood the importance of getting information to reporters as quickly as possible in order for them to meet their broadcast and print deadlines.

"If you don't work with reporters, you will spend (a lot of) time correcting mis-information."

Little couldn't say what Milwaukee government officials and law enforcement should or should not have done in the aftermath of the Sylville Smith shooting. There were two days of unrest in the Sherman Park neighborhood following the incident and a curfew.

He did suggest officials look for and develop what he called "community ambassadors," individuals who are active in and respected by the community, and work with them—even before a tragic situation develops—to build trust with residents.

Even with the one-year anniversary of Brown's death, Little remembered he and city officials held meetings with certain members of the Brown family because officials knew there would be protests.

"We wanted to make sure we worked with activists and anyone who wanted peaceful demonstrations. You can't be afraid to work with the family and activists."

"I was in a lot of tough meetings (with them). A lot of tough decisions had to be made. There wasn't always going to be a welcome mat extended."

Little stressed it is also time for elected officials to listen to their constituents and their concerns and frustrations and work with them to resolve them before there is another Michael Brown or Sylville Smith.

"The voices of concerned citizens can no longer be swept under the rug."

St. Ann Center Gala Celebrates Dreams Come True

St. Ann Center for Intergenerational Care will host its 13th annual gala on Friday, Aug. 4, at Discovery World Museum. With the theme "Dream Together," the gala will celebrate the dream, started 34 years ago, that developed into a world-renowned day care program that serves children, older adults and people with disabilities all in the same home-like setting.

The event begins at 6 p.m., when guests gather for a cocktail hour in the Lakeview Tent, followed by dinner in the Pilot House. The evening features live and silent auctions, dinner catered by Bartolotta Restaurants and entertainment by SistaStrings.

Milwaukee-based sisters Monique and Chauntee Ross are classically trained instrumentalists who riff on elements of classic and gospel music to create their own unique sound. Showcased in the live auction are vacation packages to Costa Rica, Cancun and Arizona, and Milwaukee Brewers and Bucks fan packages.

All proceeds from the gala support St. Ann Center's Day Care Champions program, which directly benefits youth, frail elderly and adults with disabilities who have no means to pay for services they desperately need. The gala will also honor St. Ann Center supporters, the Carego Champions who make these services possible.

Among the adult day services offered to promote independence and a sense of purpose are whirlpool baths, physical therapy, occupational therapy, art and music therapy.

Youngsters in St. Ann Center's early childhood education program learn to respect and appreciate the adult clients as they join them for intergenerational activities on a daily basis.

The gala will also spotlight the growth of St. Ann Center from the 1999 opening of its Stein Campus, 2801 E. Morgan Ave., to its replication in 2015, when the Bucyrus Campus opened at 2450 W. North Ave. The second campus will allow the Center to more than double the number of people served, while bringing jobs to residents on Milwaukee's near north side.

St. Ann Center thanks Marji Singer, MHS Health Wisconsin, Catalyst Construction and all the generous sponsors who support the gala and the continued care for all ages and abilities at both campuses.

PASSAGES

Martha Rivera Chavis

Martha Rivera Chavis, wife of civil rights leader Dr. Benjamin Chavis, dies at 53

As the NNPA-Black Press of America welcomed the arrival of Black Press Month, it mourns the passing of Martha Rivera Chavis, the wife and first lady of the NNPA, of which her husband, Dr. Benjamin Chavis Jr., is the president and CEO.

Mrs. Chavis died July 6, at her home in Montclair, N.J. She was 53.

It was during Dr. Chavis' brief leadership at the NAACP (1993-94) that his wife gained national recognition, mainly for her resourceful insight in helping negotiate a "Fair Share" deal between the NAACP and Denny's Restaurant. In fact, she was instrumental in convincing her husband to take the job at the NAACP.

Though born in the Dominican Republic, Mrs. Chavis acquired a vast understanding of international affairs far beyond her homeland. When she met Dr. Chavis in 1989, she was working as a translator of French-to-Portuguese for Angola's United Nations ambassador.

Dr. Chavis, upon being introduced to her, was immediately smitten and even more attracted when he learned of her intelligence and her knowledge of history, particularly as it pertained to Africa and the Diaspora.

"I was impressed that this young sister [she was 16 years younger than he] from the Dominican Republic had an African conscience," Dr. Chavis related. "A lot of times when you from a place, you know where you and you know your roots, but Martha knew what was going on in the contemporary world."

GUEST COMMENTARY

Dems need a message and plan, not just oppose Trump

While the country watches on in angst over investigations into possible collusion between Russian spies and President Donald Trump and his associates, Democrats in Congress must realize they must do more than simply oppose Trump.

Politicians on the left need a message and they need a plan—a plan to beat the Republicans, relieve Trump and the GOP of their death grip on the U.S. regovernment, and come up with their own agenda to run the country.

Otherwise, the Dems will plan to fail.

The party is presently engaged in a rebranding process, with an economic agenda called a “Better Deal,” a jobs package centered around infrastructure, minimum wage and trade. Democrats could also throw in a “Medicare for all” or single-payer slogan to counter the train wreck known as Trumpcare—the “repeal and replace” legislation that would eliminate Obamacare in favor of a dystopian Republican nightmare, a vision of wholesale human rights abuses, suffering and death. And let’s not forget issues such as crippling student loan debt, which Bernie Sanders championed in the 2016 campaign as part of an effort to address the needs of young people.

With the walls closing in on the Trump administration, in light of growing revelations that point to the Trump campaign possibly colluding with Russia to rig the 2016 presidential election in favor of Trump, the Democrats must be ready.

The talk has been shifting to treason, with the real possibility that people from the Trump campaign and White House staff could face prison bars before this is all over. This White House is looking more and more like an organized crime ring (think Goodfellas rather than House of Cards).

Everybody, it seems, has talked with Russian agents about something or another, and they’re already lawyered up and ready to take the Fifth. This, as Special Counsel Robert Mueller stacks his team full of prosecutors, and New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman appears poised to take down Trump, and go after his money and his people. Trump may be the worse president since Andrew Johnson, and he and his team are steadily dismantling the government and America’s beloved democracy.

But Democrats have to do more than decide what to wear at the Trump impeachment party, if and when the president leaves office, and the Republican Party possibly implodes with him. Democrats should be ready to pick up the pieces and rebuild the country.

Ohio political activist Nina Turner spoke some truths when she said the Democrats lost “because they lost touch with the people, not because they were moving left.” Meanwhile, a recent discussion on NBC’s Meet The Press between RNC Chair Ronna McDaniel and DNC Chair Tom Perez highlighted the Democrats’ failure to go for the jugular, fight hard and seize on some fresh, new talking points.

Fighting nice, being polite and not wanting to offend anybody has cost the Democratic Party the presidency, both houses of Congress, the U.S. Supreme Court and a majority of state houses and governorships, even when they win more votes.

This quixotic quest by the Democrats for conservative, white so-called blue-collar Trump voters is foolish and pointless. After all, they love the man because he beats up on Latinos, Muslims and Black folks, and grabs women by the p*ssy. So, how does the party that stands up for people of color and women’s rights plan to run as the “racist light” or “misogyny light” party? What Dems need to do is run real people who don’t need spinning and consulting, and real ideas that don’t need to be passed through focus groups.

They must find more candidates like Randy Bryce, the progressive Army vet and steelworker who wants to unseat Speaker Paul Ryan in Congress. They need young candidates and they need to compete everywhere, including in the new South, that one day will not be so red, and is growing with Blacks, Latinos and progressive whites.

What’s more, women must seize the reins of leadership in the Democratic Party, particularly women of color. Black women are the backbone of the party, the most enthusiastic voters and the most devoted party loyalists, yet their votes are taken for granted, and they are ignored.

Listen to Congresswoman Maxine Waters often, and follow the lead of Senator Kamala Harris, a rising star who made Attorney General Jeff Sessions nervous, and may very well make Donald Trump Jr. cry in an upcoming Senate hearing.

Say what you will about the GOP, but they stayed focused on undermining the Obama presidency and attempting to decimate his signature accomplishment, Obamacare. Similarly, Democrats would be well served to continuously bang the drum of a Trump impeachment, and his removal via the 25th Amendment.

Brewers’ Negro League Tribute Game about more than balls and strikes

For a community starved for cultural events, the Brewers’ Negro League Tribute Game (NLTG) represents a summer Godsend.

Well, maybe “Godsend” is a bit of an exaggeration. But the event stands out as one of a handful of inimitable Black-centric festivities we look forward to each summer.

Moreover, unlike other “must attend” summer celebrations, the NLTG is grounded in a unique observance of important historical significance.

Since the premature death of African World Festival, we’ve tried to fill the void with the Juneteenth, Garfield Fest and the NLTG.

That’s a sad commentary for a city that is 42% African American, particularly given that much smaller ethnicities host large festivals to specifically celebrate their heritages.

In many respects, Garfield Fest and Juneteenth mimic some of the best attributes of African World Fest.

The African exhibits, entertainment and food that defined African World Festival were made all the more appreciable because of the fraternity and brotherhood displayed by attendees.

Likewise, the NLTG has also grown into an exceptional cultural experience.

Sponsored by the Milwaukee Brewers, the event grew out of a Negro League Wall of Fame erected at the old County Stadium.

The Brewers, under Bud Selig and later his daughter Wendy, pioneered the first tribute to the Negro Leagues, a talent laden fraternity of some of the greatest American athletes who were denied the opportunity to play in the “big” leagues because of the color of their skin (and some suggest their athletic prowess).

It wasn’t until Jackie Robinson was chosen to “integrate” major league baseball in 1947 that America was provided a glimpse of what it was missing.

The Negro Leagues continued for the next decade as the slow process of desegregation took place, but many of the most talented players never got a chance to showcase their skills on the national stage.

The Seligs sought to honor those heroes and pioneers with a wall of fame.

The wall was inadvertently put up for sale when the stadium was demolished to make room for Miller Park, but was retrieved by Negro League player Dennis Biddle and Bishop Sedgwick Daniels of Holy Redeemer COGIC 13 years ago.

Fortunately, the new Brewer ownership, headed by Mark Attanasio, saw the value of not only expanding the tribute, but also sponsoring tailgate and induction ceremonies that have taken on a life of their own.

This year’s honorees are Don Porter and Reggie Howard. They will be joined by a dozen other Negro Leaguers at a celebration at the Hilton Hotel on Friday, August 11 and will be honored by the Brewers the next day when the team hosts the Cincinnati Reds.

Both teams will wear the uniforms of their home Negro League teams. The Brewers will wear the uniforms of the Milwaukee Bears, our city’s representative in the Negro League back in 1923.

On Sunday the two players will be inducted into the Wall of Fame at ceremonies at Holy Redeemer.

But it is the game and the tailgate “party” that feeds the hunger of Black patrons.

The tailgate is held at Helfaer Field prior to the 6 p.m. game and includes continuous entertainment highlighting several local acts and a DJ.

Food and drinks are included in the ticket package, which this year will include an All Star kickball game at the mini-stadium.

It’s a fun time for all with an emphasis on family.

What makes the event all the more special is the presence of Negro Leaguers.

They represent true Black History, a page that is both disparaging and gratifying.

Even though the Negro League existed because of institutional racism, it provided Black America with a superior professional sporting event that rivaled anything offered in the major leagues.

History reveals some of the Negro Leaguers—think Satchel Paige, considered the best pitcher in history, and Josh Gibson, the best hitter of all time—would have rewritten major league statistics.

Robinson, it has been told, was far from the best Negro Leaguer to make it to the big leagues. Although he became Rookie of the Year and eventually made it to the Hall of Fame, he was chosen in part because of his education and ability to intellectually deflect racist taunts and threats on his life.

The trials and tribulations, adventures and festivities of the surviving players (only a handful are still alive) make for the type of conversations that enrich the heart and spirit.

Just the other day I attended a Pastor’s United meeting when one of the cleric’s proudly proclaimed his father, Warren Kirkendoll, played in the Negro Leagues. He’s 89 and a source of pride and inspiration.

I can relate, having had the opportunity to talk to dozens of Negro Leaguers over the years.

One of my favorite players is Mamie “Peanut” Johnson, one of four females to play in the Negro Leagues. Peanut was a pitcher, and although small in stature, she was an excellent pitcher and struck out some of the best during a short (no pun intended) career in which she compiled a 33-8 record.

Peanut was a warehouse of historical trivia, and even at her advanced age

Black Love, Black Support: Thank You All

Let me first start off by acknowledging all those that read my article. I appreciate your feedback and community concerns. It’s uplifting to have so many of you willing to stand up for a difference, proving that we are capable of coming together. Many of you know me from my dark days. Many of you prayed for me and never turned your backs. Many of you I have promised to make a change. Well, I am still evolving and because of you I still am able to grow.

Thanks to many of you, I was able to rid myself of that ugly societal curse inhaled at birth. Due to your constant support, whether it was openly given or hidden, I received it. As of today, it worked. Support for another is a major lifeline. In the streets, it’s called the “plug.” If you have the plug, it’s sometimes because of who you know.

I meet many people and I cannot name them all. Everyone has a dream. Many have problems and all have suggestions. I listen to them all because I remember no one would listen to me. Although they say I talk too much, I can say that my conversations are always on point.

The encouragement I had and still have today, come from all ages. The most encouraging is from those like me from yesterday. Those that are still fighting to break away. Why? It is because I use to be that example of what not to become. Now I am a sample of what others can become. Now my life is no way all fun. I just smile and remain proud to be able to work and be of support and help.

It has been a long journey with more road ahead. We are not giving up no matter what he said or what she said. We should continue to support others and adopt a dream. Let’s show them, through progress, we are determined to win. Yes, I say black family because I am a black man and I see many of my people falling or refusing to stand up. I owe no apologies. My mission is that my people also become free. Peace. Thank you all for supporting me. You are one of the few reasons I continue to believe.

We Can Make a Change: Millennials Should Continue to Work Together Collaboratively

As tempting as it is to do everything on your own, the world was created with people in it to make life a little easier. As a millennial, I find myself taking on many projects and building my brand and my business. In the process of building, I gained a sense of independence and simultaneously, I unknowingly eliminated any outside help. It wasn’t long before I began to realize a stagnation in my growth as a person and as a business.

Being an entrepreneur requires much self-discipline, a focused mindset and most importantly it requires a little help because even the greatest of the greatest build teams. They adopt the concept of togetherness and utilize that to the best of their ability. At some point in your daily life, you must sit back and analyze your progression and ask yourself, “What does togetherness mean to me?”

The millennial generation is tremendously powerful. We hold the ability and knowledge to change the world but we must remain humble even in our highest times even if that means asking for help. According to Millennial Legacy.com, a great deal of millennials value teamwork and actually prefer a sense of unity and collaboration rather than division and competition.

According to a 2007 CIRCLE survey, Millennial participants were asked, “How much difference do you believe people working together as group can make in solving problems?” 92 percent agreed that working together will definitely do more than working alone. Isn’t that amazing?

Okay, so maybe you are an individual who prefers to work alone. You may feel like doing so cuts down on disagreements and heavy tension. Maybe you believe that your ideas will go unheard. Believe me, I can most certainly relate. The only thing is, you can only go as far as you allow yourself to go. When it comes to success, happiness and prosperity the outcome of your life solely depends on you. In other words; you are your biggest threat. You think; therefore, you are.

If you are one who prefers to work solo and you are presented with an opportunity to be a part of a team, you should always enter the project with a positive mindset. Believe that your purpose will inspire others. Whether the task be forming a study group at school, starting a non-profit organization or linking with people to plan a special event, remember that the task is far much bigger than you. Remember that together we stand and divided we fall. Keep in mind that even the world’s greatest is a part of some sort of team or collaboration. When you feel like putting on your super hero gear and you feel like you’re obligated to do everything on your own, remember this:

“Alone we can do so little, but together we can do so much.”

Y&E YOUTH & EDUCATION

Prospective students put on the fast track for fall

Prospective students interested in attending Mount Mary University this fall will experience a streamlined process that puts them on the fast track to enrollment.

To make college accessible to more Milwaukee women - whether they are new high school graduates or busy working women - new president Dr. Christine Pharr has championed a fast-track enrollment process to quickly assist them with enrollment and financial aid. Dr. Pharr joined Mount Mary on July 1.

With the start of the semester only a month away, potential students might not realize that college is still possible, she said. But with Mount Mary's highly personalized educational experience and generous financial aid packages, Pharr said, "I don't want anyone to miss the opportunity to be here."

Application fees will be waived for students who have not yet enrolled for the fall semester and applications will fast-track through the enrollment process until August 18.

Mount Mary University offers more than 30 undergraduate programs for women, including the new food science program, nursing and fashion design, and nine graduate programs for women and men in four schools: Arts & Design, Humanities, Social Sciences & Education, Natural & Health Sciences and Business.

Here are some key dates for enrollment:

- Assessments for class placement will be held August 2 or 14.
- Registration day will be held on August 17 for students to select their classes.
- The fall session begins Saturday, August 26.

Admissions counselors are available to answer any questions prospective students have through the fast-track process. For more information on fall enrollment, visit www.mtmary.edu/fasttrack or contact Admissions at (414) 930-3024, mmu-admiss@mtmary.edu.

Useful Back-to-School shopping tips

With the start of school just around the corner, many parents are starting to plan their back-to-school shopping trips. Not to mention National Bargain Hunting Week 2017, slated for August 7 - 13, is the perfect opportunity to snag some of those back-to-school necessities at reasonable price points!

As back-to-school and National Bargain Hunting week approaches, Pleasant Prairie Premium Outlets and Johnson Creek Premium Outlets can share some useful back-to-school shopping money-saving tips that we think would be of interest to your readers. Some of these tips include:

• Before you shop, make a list of what you need. Making an inventory of everything your child already has and needs will allow your shopping to go smoothly without over-spending.

• Set a budget and stick to it. Keep in mind the non-negotiable items, like the class list of required supplies, and go from there. Clothing, shoes and backpacks allow for more flexibility.

• Expand your shopping options. Instead of heading to your favorite online store or specialty shop, consider other possibilities. For example, at Pleasant Prairie Premium Outlets and Johnson Creek Premium Outlets, everyday savings are 25 to 65 percent. Buying your child's new Nike sneakers full price can cost you upwards of $80, but at the Nike Factory Store, they'll only cost you $55.

• Substitute items for less expensive alternatives. If an item your child wants doesn't fit into your budget, think about less expensive alternatives that are similar.

To Be Young, Black, and in Education

By Nicole Sahbae

In the next week, I will be closing my time as a summer intern at the National Alliance for Public Charter Schools and beginning my final undergraduate year at Howard University.

I've learned more about public education at the National Alliance in two months than I have in the past year.

However, even though I work for a charter school advocacy organization, I do not consider myself pro-charter. I am also not pro-district.

Truthfully, I've heard many arguments that support charter public schools and many that support district schools - all with valid points and facts to back them up.

So, when I began to find myself truly confused, I did what I always do. I looked up what Black people are saying about this.

Black opinion + my own thoughts = a solid case to base my life decisions on. While it may not be the most mathematical equation for success, it works for me. I googled "Black leaders charter schools" and felt a small sense of relief come over me because I was going to get an answer.

I wasn't going to have to wonder anymore because the Black leaders in education would tell me what their point of view is, why they have it, where the research came from, and what they are going to do about it.

Looking back on this now, I'm aware that it sounds like I don't use my brain to critically think, but we all do this in some form. In politics, people look up what the standard Democratic or Republican viewpoint is; in media people go to their favorite artist's page to read their view; and in school, students go to their favorite teacher for their opinion.

As I began to read through the articles, I found topics about the NAACP and Black Lives Matter being pitted against Black leaders in education.

I was pissed! So, two huge organizations that have Black prosperity at their core are at odds with Black education leaders and parents? I was so irritated that I closed the screen and went to deal with this confusion another day.

Weeks passed and I continued to gain information. I read the letter that had been written and signed by 160 Black leaders in support of charters, I watched clips of the NAACP's special hearings on charter schools, and I researched teachers unions and their disdain for the charter movement. I turned over every rock I could find for some sort of answer.

Despite all the research and opinions, I still could not figure out who was on the right side of history. I could not look to Black leaders in this situation because they are consumed with the politics of the district vs. charter debate, just like many others in education.

This isn't the first time I found disappointment with Black role models - Raven-Symoné was a huge heart breaker - but this is too important to ignore. Every second that is spent focusing on which school is better or what should be the dominant structure is doing a disservice to our children.

Our children are the ones suffering without a quality education and are then chastised by society for not meeting "the bar".

I get that money, politics, and power are important, but we can't afford to fight this fight with each other. We have no choice but to be unified.

According to the Civil Rights Data Collection, black students are suspended and expelled at a rate three times greater than white students. This is something we should be focusing on. If our children don't make it, that not only affects us but it is on us.

The white school leaders that are trying to make change will be heartbroken if the years of work they put into improving public schools don't pay off, but we will be crippled.

This is not an attack on Black leaders today, this is a cry for help. I'm a 21-year-old intern, trying to graduate from college. I'm doing everything in my power to change the narrative for our children, but I don't have the power, yet.

Black leaders, I'm begging you to use your power to create. Create the schools for our children that also provide jobs for our people. Position it so that Black school leaders have the resources to train up our kids.

If you are an organization with the words Black, African American, Negro, or Colored People in your title then this is your duty, this is your fight.

You don't have to reinvent the wheel, just take a page from Pimp My Ride and make it better. At the very least, create a space for conversations to flow freely regarding the schools our children go to. We may never reach a consensus and that is okay.

There are multiple different ways to learn, to teach, and to lead. If you can't do it, use your resources to find someone who can. This isn't a conversation I wish to pick up in twenty years when I am in your shoes and we don't have twenty more years to wait. I don't care what structure is used to educate our kids, we just need something that works.

McPhan family strengthen the ties that bind with reunion in Esterook Park

The descendants of the late Joseph and Anna Mae McPhan paid honor to the couple by carrying on the tradition of the McPhan family reunion.

This year the family came together from all over the country to Esterbrook Park in the Milwaukee suburb of Shorewood to renew the practice of gathering the generations, to allow the old to pass on the history, stories and traditions to the young; to welcome newborn additions and remember those family elders who have passed on.

One of the McPhan reunion organizers said it's important to hold family reunions, believing people of color have drifted away from the practice of gathering to maintain the blood connections that have been the fabric of Black life and the strength of Black America.

HEALTH & WELLNESS

This year, BloodCenter of Wisconsin is celebrating its 70th anniversary of saving lives, serving communities and seeking cures. We are able to advance our life-saving mission thanks to the loyal support of blood donors in Milwaukee County.

This summer, blood supplies have reached critically low levels, particularly for O negative blood. Levels have hovered at or below one day supply, when a three day supply is preferred in order to help patients in traumas and emergency situations.

While 37% of the U.S. population is eligible to donate blood, less than 10% donate every year. Patients in need of blood tomorrow rely on the life-saving generosity of blood donors today.

Milwaukee County blood donors can help patients in need at BloodCenter of Wisconsin's blood drives:

- Monday, Aug. 7 from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. at St. Martin of Tours, 7963 S. 116th St., Franklin
- Friday, Aug. 25 from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. at St. Luke's Medical Center, 2901 Kinnickinnic River Parkway, Milwaukee Donors can schedule an appointment by calling 1-877-BE-A-HERO (1-877-232-4376), or visiting www.bcw.edu.

Anyone 17 or older who is in good health and meets eligibility requirements is encouraged to donate blood. Appointments are preferred, but walk-in donors are also welcome. Parental consent is required for 16-year-olds to donate. The entire process takes about an hour. Donors should bring a photo ID that includes birth date.

Bronzeville Arts Ensemble Announces New Artistic Director and Residency

Bronzeville Arts Ensemble (BAE) is proud to name Sheri Williams Pannell as its new Artistic Director. A stage director, playwright, theatre educator and performer, Pannell is a long-standing member of the Milwaukee theatre community.

With Pannell's tenure also comes a new residency with Black Arts MKE. "Bronzeville Arts Ensemble is fortunate to have had the opportunity to work in partnership with Milwaukee Repertory Theater over the past two years," said Williams Pannell.

"Collaboration helps make theater happen, especially for relatively new companies like BAE. We are grateful to the Rep for their support and mentorship. Yet, the most challenging aspect of theater is fundraising and audience development. We believe Black Arts MKE's commitment to making local African American arts institutions more financially sound and capable of reaching a larger audience is essential to our growth and survival."

ABOUT BRONZEVILLE ARTS ENSEMBLE

Founded in 2013, Bronzeville Arts Ensemble strives to illuminate the black experience in America by developing and creating theater while also providing artistic and educational programming opportunities, collaborating with the local and national theatre community, and inspiring healing and positive social change. had an eye open for "adventure." In fact, if I didn't know better, I would have thought she hit on me during our hours together. Too bad I wasn't young enough to keep up with her fastball.

I've attended all but one of the NLT games, and look forward to it every year. It's truly a family event, and like Garfield Fest and Juneteenth, it provides a venue for a positive cultural exchange.

I take someone new every year. Over the past decade, that has included sons, grandsons and a few select friends.

Each has tried to bribe me for return visits. I'm hosting a lottery for the privilege this year.

Of course, most end up buying tickets and taking someone new to share the unique event.

Often, that means a significant other. As I said years ago, a (baseball) diamond becomes a girl's best friend once she attends a Brewers' game.

I take a lot of pride in telling people I was on the board that built Miller Park. I'm equally proud to tell the world our stadium is home to the premiere Negro League tribute game.

See you at the Ballpark.

OPEN LETTER TO OUR READERS

Milwaukee Community Journal is an actual brick and mortar building, not just an online entity. I was downstairs reviewing our equipment in the storage office and it's like visiting a museum. Old relics, equipment, computers, software and past editions illuminate 40 years journaling the history of change.

Since our origin in 1976, we've moved with our audience. Today our readers are predominantly millennials, 18-40 years of age, shakers and movers, the buyers! They are buying homes, cars, raising families. They are eating "fresh," active in politics, exercising and partying.

Our readers find us in print, with our twice-weekly editions in tenured retail outlets, churches and selective distribution spots. But they also read us online at milwaukeecommunityjournal.com We're in this to win this! We're dynamic....crisp clear....interactive...and to be honest - exploding with information that you want to read!

We're perfect for new and established advertisers! We want more local interaction and community written articles. We want to offer more millennial access to a proven community source.

This is who we are. But one thing is still deep on our hearts, and that is you've got to join our team. You're the community part of the Milwaukee Community Journal. Let's build together!

NAACP names longstanding member and current vice chair Derrick Johnson interim president and CEO tors Derrick Johnson as interim president and CEO, effective immediately. The unanimous decision was made by the executive committee of the board of directors during the Association's 108th annual convention in Baltimore, Maryland. The NAACP released the following statement.

"I am thrilled to announce that my friend and colleague Derrick Johnson has been appointed to interim president and CEO. I could not think of a better, more battle-tested or more qualified individual to guide the NAACP through this transition period," said Leon Russell, Board Chairman of the NAACP. "Derrick's longtime service with the Association will allow him to take decisive action to deal with daily challenges. He will also serve as the primary spokesman for the NAACP.

"I have every confidence in Derrick and will support him in this new endeavor every step of the way."

"It is truly an honor and a privilege to be named the interim president and CEO of an organization that I've served for decades," said Derrick Johnson, interim president and CEO of the NAACP.

"There's a lot of work that needs to be done and we won't waste any time getting to it.

We are facing unprecedented threats to our democracy and we will not be sidelined while our rights are being eroded every day.

"We remain steadfast and immovable, and stand ready on the front lines of the fight for justice."

Derrick Johnson will serve as interim president and CEO until a new president is named. Derrick Johnson formerly served as vice chairman of the NAACP National Board of Directors as well as State President for the Mississippi State Conference NAACP.

The first vice chair of the Mississippi State Conference NAACP will assume leadership of the state conference operations.

Not only was she globally sophisticated, she spoke French, Portuguese, Italian, Spanish and, of course, English. She was a graduate of the Paris-Sorbonne University, one of the most prestigious academies in the world.

The couple met at a time when Africa, and especially Angola, was in the throes of a devastating civil war, and after their marriage they adopted 10 Angolan children, several of them with missing limbs. The couple had a total of eight children, five together and three from Dr. Chavis' previous marriage.

Mrs. Chavis was unwavering by her husband's side, taking on key assignments as he worked with Minister Louis Farrakhan in the organization of the Million Man March in 1995. In the succeeding Million Women March, she was among the leaders of the event, facilitating the media and promotional goals.

Her dedication to civil and human rights struggles is being celebrated by prominent leaders across the nation, and these tributes to her activism and courage are sure to resound as her family and friends prepare for her final rites.

ment on the grounds he is "unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office."

If the Democrats want any chance of rebuilding, they must fight and eradicate all Republican measures to disrupt and destroy democracy. This includes eliminating gerrymandering of electoral districts, fighting voter suppression efforts on the state and federal level that are meant to target Black and brown voters, and stem the rising tide of GOP-controlled states. Once they control two-thirds of the states, conservatives awash with Koch brothers money will realize their dream of a constitutional convention to push a balanced budget amendment, eliminate federal taxes, limit the role of government, and threaten our freedoms under the Bill of Rights.

Finally, the Democratic Party would be well served to align with the resistance and social justice movements that are working on the ground to bring about change in the lives of everyday people.

Much is at stake, and the Democrats must ask if they are up to the task. If not, they need new blood and better ideas to get the job done. What they are facing is a gunfight, and butter knives won't do.

Fox News and Ebony Magazine Receive "Thumbs Down" Award from NABJ

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- The National Association of Black Journalists (NABJ) issues its 2017 Thumbs Down Award to FOX News and Ebony magazine today.

The Thumbs Down Award is presented annually to an individual or organization for especially insensitive, racist or stereotypical reporting, commentary, photography or cartoon about the black community or for engaging in practices at odds with the goals of the National Association of Black Journalists.

"We take this award very seriously," said NABJ President Sarah Glover. "It is our hope that the recipients would re-evaluate their policies and procedures to ensure that they are following the highest journalistic and ethical standards."

FOX News was selected for numerous reasons. In addition to lawsuits accusing the cable news network of "abhorrent, intolerable, unlawful and hostile racial discrimination," there have also been allegations of sexual harassment. Additionally, the lack of diversity in key positions, is a major concern for NABJ.

"It seems FOX has allowed a very unhealthy environment to fester," said NABJ Vice President of Broadcast Dorothy Tucker. "There has to be a level of accountability and it starts at the top. Management has to do better."

Co-recipient Ebony magazine, under its new owners Clear View Group, has made headlines this year because of staff cuts; the relocation of its headquarters from its founding base in Chicago to Los Angeles; and, its very public and sometimes offensive responses to reports of late or non-payment for work already performed by staff or freelance journalists.

"Many of the decisions being made by Ebony's new owners seem counter to the vision of founder John H. Johnson," said NABJ Vice President of Print Marlon A. Walker. "Ebony and its sister publication Jet are near and dear to us. To hear writers whose words bring us much joy aren't being paid for those words is sad, unconscionable, unacceptable."

"Johnson is probably rolling over in his grave."

FOX News must address its work culture and diversity at all levels of employment, including management positions, and the owners of Ebony magazine must resolve its pay issues with freelancers immediately and work to rebuild its image after several alarming missteps.

ELECTION WATCH 2016 THE RESULTS

Senate incumbent Taylor defeats challenger Barnes in hotly contested primary race

Jason fields to return to Assembly, Gwen Moore easily defeats challenger Gary George

Compiled by MCJ Staff

Incumbent state Sen. Lena Taylor handily won the most hotly anticipated, contested and discussed political race of the year, defeating her challenger, Rep. Manjela Barnes in the August 9 state primary elections.

Sen. Lena Taylor

Taylor collected 61 percent (11,430) of the votes in her fourth district senatorial race. Despite heavy financial backing and support from the predominantly white suburb of Shorewood—and the political action group, Wisconsin Working Family Party, Barnes could only muster 39 percent (7,414) of the votes.

Jason Fields

In what could best be described as the second most hotly contested political race in the community, incumbent Milwaukee County District Attorney John Chisholm defeated Atty. Yvonne Swanigan. Chisholm received 51,465 votes (65 percent) to Swanigan's 27,570 votes (35 percent).

Described by local WNOV radio talk show host Sherwin Hughes as "a phoenix rising from the ashes," former State Rep. Jason Fields reclaimed his former District 1 Assembly seat, narrowly defeating Darnel Gibson.

Fields collected 2,930 votes (59 percent) to Gibson's 2,062 (41 percent).

If there were ever a proverbial "snake walk," it would be the contest between incumbent U.S. Congresswoman Gwen Moore and former state Senator Gary George.

Figuratively speaking (and expectedly), Moore walked all over George in this primary election, receiving 85 percent of the votes (55,093) to George's poultry 15 percent (6,508 votes).

In the other senate race involving our community, Rep. LaTonya Johnson will succeed Nikiya Harris Dodd in senate district six, who stepped down from the position for personal reasons.

Johnson defeated two other challengers for the seat Thomas Harrison and Michael Bonds, the former president of the Milwaukee Public School's Board of Directors.

Johnson collected 9,300 votes (61 percent). The race is second place between Harris and Bonds was tight, with Harris receiving 3,158 votes (20 percent), and Bonds 3,011 (19 percent).

In two other Assembly races in predominately Black districts, incumbent state Rep. Leon Young retained his District 16 seat defeating Edgar Lin, Brandy Bond, and Stephen Jansen.

David Crowley will now represent the 17th Assembly district, defeating two other candidates, Kim Burns—the daughter of the late legendary lawmaker Polly Williams—and Marcus Hart.
